Egg Marketing Association Learns Of Salmonella Research

BY LOU ANN GOOD

LANCASTER — News outbreaks on salmonella enteritidis is causing the Pennsylvania Egg Marketing Association concern.

At their monthly meeting on Thursday evening at the Olde Hickory Inn, University of Pennsylvania personnel Dr. David Kradel, a veterinarian, and Dr. Charles Benson, scientist, shared current findings and possible solutions in dealing with the disease.

Dr. David Kradel said that statistics pinpoint that more salmonella cases are being reported in the northeastern part of the country. Of 2000 people who were contamindated by the virus, eleven deaths resulted. Many of these cases are linked with egg or egg products contamination. He pointed out, "Although there appears to be more in the northeastern states, it may be simply a more gung ho health department."

He continued, "We are living in a time when the public wants to live in a no-risk environment."

A risk-free environment is impossible Dr. Kradel said, "but consumers and press perceive the presence of salmonella enteritidis a potential disease organism in raw food as a significant threat to health."

Dr. Kradel with Dr. Charles Benson a microbiologist chemist who has studied salmonella for the last 18 years, reported on the research they are conducting at

Anderson Chosen To Fill County Post

BY PAT PURCELL

Robert J. Anderson, Cooperative Extension head of the New Holland satellite office, will fill the post left vacant by Arnold G. Lueck, who retired in December from the Lancaster County Cooperative Extensive Service staff.

Due to a state spending freeze funds were not made available to allow for an immediate appointment to Lueck's post. Anderson may join the staff by the end of September as soon as his replacement can be found for the New Holland office.

Anderson, 43, will bring to his new position as county agronomist, many years of agricultural experience in the county as well as throughout the state. He served the Adult Farmer Program adviser in the Eastern Lancaster County School District for nearly 12 years. He left the Adult Farming Program to take his present position at the New Holland office when funds were made available by the Rural Clean Water Program in January of 1986 to study nutrient management.

"I consider this the most challenging position in the state. To join the staff in Arnie's position is really a golden opportunity for me and I feel very fortunate to have been selected," said Anderson.

Anderson began his career in state agriculture at Penn State University. Upon graduation in 1969 he taught at Wallenpaupack High School in northeastern Pennsylvania.

"Agriculture not being real big up there I decided to return to New Holland where I had done some student teaching and still had some contacts. I worked for Sperry-New Holland until I went in the Army," said Anderson.

After serving at Fort Dix as a drill instructor Anderson returned to agriculture and joined the federal Soil Conservation Service at the West Chester office in Chester

Effect Of Tax Changes On Dairy Farmers

BY KARL BERGER
Special Correspondent

Don't call it the Tax Reform Act of 1986 around dairy farmers. The package of changes Congress passed late last year to simplify the federal income tax code and reduce the tax burden for many individuals will do neither for most dairy farmers.

The changes, which began to take effect this past January, were supposed to make it easier for most taxpayers to file their returns. But, as many dairy farmers will soon discover, the changes will have the opposite effect on them, requiring, in many cases, more records and more forms than were necessary in the past, according to Larry Jenkins, a farm management specialist at Penn State University.

Dick Dennison, manager of the Pennsylvania Farmers Association's Farm Management Services, concurs. The new tax code, he said, "is not tax simplification in any way, shape or form."

The changes also were designed to be "revenue neutral" — balancing reduction in the high marginal rates paid by individuals with large incomes, for instance, against the elimination of most tax shelters. Because dairymen took advantage of many of these shelters, they tend to be among those who lose rather than gain under the new law.

A study done this spring by Jenkins and colleague William Grisley found that more dairymen will pay more taxes as a result of the changes. The economists analyzed the 1984 returns of 2,091 dairymen who were Farm Management Services clients. Projecting their tax liability under the new code, the researchers concluded that these farmers would pay an average of $532 more in federal income taxes. However, a few dairymen, 150 of those studied, would wind up paying less and 1,028, almost half the total, would see no change, according to the study.

The authors note the impact of the tax law changes is more severe on dairying than it is on most other areas of farming, an effect they attribute tot he dairyman's greater use of the exclusion on capital gains income and investment tax credit, both of which have been eliminated. In a recent phone conversation, Jenkins said the loss of the capital gains exclusion — used mainly to shield 60 percent of the income from cull cow sales — is the most important of these factors.

Other changes that may increase the tax liability for dairymen, according to Jenkins and other advisors, include the elimination of the deduction for two-earner couples, the loss of an exclusion on income from dividends and more use of the alternative, straight-line depreciation schedule.

No more capital gains exclusion will have a major impact on one special class of dairymen: those planning to sell out. In the past, farmers who sold their cows or their farms paid, at worst, no more than 20 percent of these capital gains in taxes (40 percent taxable at a top rate of 50 percent). By contrast, all capital gains in 1987 (when the top marginal rate is 38 percent) and beyond will be taxed at 28 percent.

New Bolton Hosts FARMER Fundraiser

BY PAT PURCELL

KENNETT SQUARE (CHESTER CO.) — Farmers, state legislators and others involved in the farming industry gathered Thursday at a luncheon sponsored by the Farmers Allied for Responsive, More Efficient Representation (FARMER), the political action committee of the Pennsylvania Farmers Association.

Bob Wagner of the American Farmland Trust spoke to the group on the farmland preservation programs running sucessfully in several states and explained how the programs operate.

The luncheon and accompanying tour of the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine's New Bolton Center were sponsored to raise money to contribute to the campaigns of

Seven Counties Eligible For Aid

HARRISBURG (AP) — U.S Agriculture officials on Wednesday approved disaster declarations for seven Pennsylvania counties so drought-plagued farmers can apply for federal aid.

The department's disaster declaration was for the counties of Berks, Cumberland, Dauphin, Lebannon, Perry, Schuylkill and York.

In addition, the adjacent counties of Adams, Carbon, Columbia, Juniata, Lehigh, Luzerne, Montgomer, Northumberland and

When you get a chance to show someone around your dairy farm who knows nothing about milking cows or feeding calves but wants to learn, that's fun.

And that's what happened to Stephanie Meyers, Franklin County Dairy Princess, when Franklin County Fair Queen Leslie Finnegan got together last week. Bonnie Breckbill, Franklin County Correspondent has the story on page B19. You'll want to read it!

ACRES CORN UPDATE: Corn futures settled higher again this afternoon on buying generated by light midwestern farmer selling. Further strength was added by yesterday's higher-than-expected export inspections, with further gains pared by USDA's announcement that $2.0 billion dollars in generic certificates for advanced deficiency payments would be issued October 1st. The December option posted gains of 1-3/4 cents, settling at $1.73-3/4.

ACRES SOYBEAN UPDATE: Soybeans settled from 3/4 to 2-1/4 cents lower this afternoon after trading higher throughout the session. Profit-taking near the close and lower soymeal quotes put soybeans on the defensive. Nearby months were pressured by talk of an increase in farmer selling and the proximity to CCC resale levels in some locations. Support early in the session was linked to active follow-through buying from yesterday's strong close. A slightly higher dollar weighed on soymeal along with overbought conditions, and ideas that European demand may soon abate.

ACRES WHEAT UPDATE: Wheat futures settled higher, but off session highs on selling associated with profit-taking. The continued talk of quality concerns in European wheat underpinned prices along with ideas that the Soviet Union might be looking at another 2.0 to 4.0 MMT of US wheat under the export bonus program. Further support came from steady to higher Gulf basis levels and yesterday's higher-than-expected weekly export inspections. Prices rose from 1-3/4 cent to 3-1/2 cents today with the December closing at $2.96-1/2, up 2-1/2.

choppy trading with pressure stemming from long liquidation on profit-taking and the unwinding of some cattle/belly spreads. Futures were unable to sustain any rallies with traders expressing concern that the pit was overbought, and due for a technical correction. Support came from higher dressed beef prices and ideas beef cut-out values would increase. Nearby losses were pared by the strong cash fundamentals. Feeder cattle closed slightly higher, and just under session highs.

CME FEEDER CATTLE SETTLEMENT PRICE: 9/07/87 $78.16 up $ .50.

ACRES NEXT DAY OUTLOOK: cash - steady.

ACRES HOG UPDATE: Live hog and pork belly prices settled mostly higher on ideas of steady to higher cash hogs at terminal and interior hog buying stations tomorrow and cash-connected establishment of long positions. Buying was also prompted by firmer than expected midday pork product prices. Bellies continued to be dominated by technical factors as prices were lifted by light short-covering and the lifting of cattle/belly spreads.

Corn That Stands Through The Fall

That corn crop you've labored over won't do you any good if the ears are lying on the ground at harvest time But Funk's G-Hybrids will stand right through the harvest

And they'll not only stand, they'll produce record breaking yields With varieties like G-4027, tops in its field in New York Or G-4446, a record yielder in Pennsylvania Or G-4626, a standout in southern PA and Delmarva areas

And each Funk's variety is backed by Hoffman research We annually run more than 50 test plots to ensure that only the best yielding varieties reach your fields

When you're looking for outstanding yields this planting season, call your local Hoffman seed representative Or call Hoffman Seeds direct We'll deliver a corn crop that stands through the fall

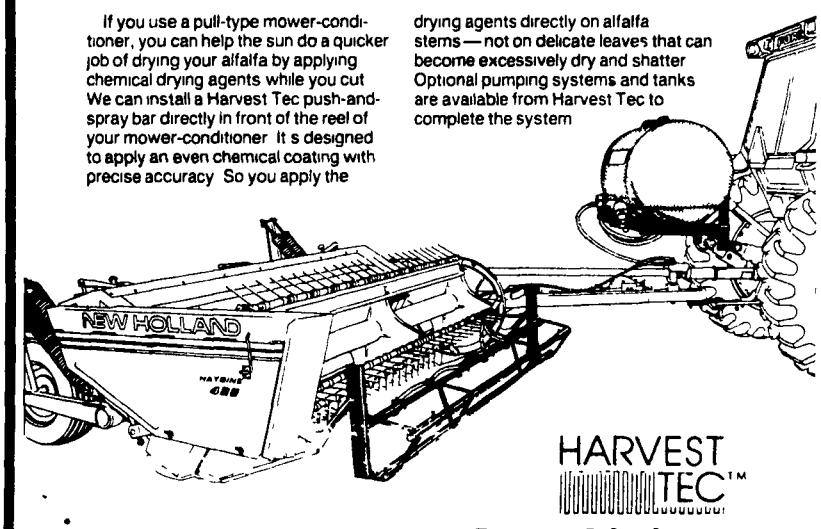
CUT HAY DRYING TIME

RAPID CURE

If you use a pull-type mower-conditioner, you can help the sun do a quicker job of drying your alfalfa by applying chemical drying agents while you cut We can install a Harvest Tec push-and-spray bar directly in front of the reel of your mower-conditioner It's designed to apply an even chemical coating with precise accuracy So you apply the drying agents directly on alfalfa stems — not on delicate leaves that can become excessively dry and shatter Optional pumping systems and tanks are available from Harvest Tec to complete the system



Chemical Hay Conditioner

When sprayed on alfalfa hay during cutting, the RAPID CURE mixture penetrates the waxy cutin layer on the stems, increasing the rate of water evaporation from the hay.

INTRODUCTORY OFFER $5.00 Per Acre

RAPID CURE:
1. Reduces chance of rain damage
2. Improves the quality of hay
3. Gets hay off faster and allows more days for new hay crop to grow.

RAPID CURE Doesn't Cost...It Pays!!!

Both university and farm tests have proven RAPID CURE Chemical Hay Conditioner pays for itself. RAPID CURE will cost about $5.50 per acre. Applied as directed, RAPID CURE will increase hay yield by 120 to 130 lbs. per acre. This increased yield pays the cost of RAPID CURE.

ABC GROFF, INC. has a quality line of RAPID CURE applicators in stock to fit your needs.

Ask the Old Farmer: How can I remove candle wax that has dripped deep into the pile of our carpet? K M Benton Harbor Mich

Scrape lightly to get any lumps off then use a little dry-cleaning fluid on the spots Blot don t rub or brush the stain Or you can place a paper bag over the spots and lightly run a hot iron over it Either way test in a small obscure spot if possible to see the effect

Home Hints To remove water marks from table tops rub in mayonnaise and let stand for an hour Wipe clean with a soft cloth

Lancaster Farming

OPINION

Obstacles Becoming Stepping Stones

Some time ago, a farmer decided to raise several acres of blueberries. He plowed up the top of a hill overlooking a beautiful valley, removed all the stones larger than a basketball, eliminated weeds, planted the young bushes and brought in tons of sawdust for mulching these acid-loving plants. The bushes grew and soon needed trimming, weeding, spraying and more mulching. Finally, after four or five years, they began to bear fruit. He can now look forward to seventy or more years of good eating and profitable marketing to those of us who would rather harvest our blueberries in small green boxes in the supermarket produce department.

According to BREAKING NEW GROUND, a newsletter for farmers with physical disabilities two things are impressive about this farmer — besides how great the berries tasted. First, this man had the patience to wait for several years before seeing even the first fruit of his labor. Second, being over 60 years of age, he had the vision to establish a crop that will probably outlive him by several generations. What a wonderful illustration of hope.

You and I live in time when we demand instant lemonade, fast food, a quick buck, 10 minute lube jobs and drive-through service. In one sense, we have become a hopeless generation in which many have forgotten the importance of planting for the future; of looking ahead; of hoping with an expectation of fulfillment. Unfortunately, the solutions to many of our most perplexing problems require patience, vision, planning, significant amounts of sweat and a hope that circumstances can be and will become better.

Someone said recently that a person who is good at complaining is never much good at anything else. But when you enjoy what you do, even the obstacles become stepping stones for learning and future success. We agree. That's impressive.

To Be Aware of the Century Farm Program

The Century Farm Program is aimed at recognizing the efforts of Pennsylvnaia's farm families which have preserved the tradition of the rural heritage of the pioneer farm.

The program was started as part of the Nation's bicentennial observance in 1976, but is being continued for its value in promoting the ideas of the family farm and the importance of farming to Pennsylvania's economy.

To be eligible for Certification as a Pennsyvlania Century Farm, a farm must have been owned by the same family for the last 100 consecutive years, and a family member must currently reside on the land. In addition, the farm must consist of ten or more acres of the original holdings or gross at least $1,000 a year from the sale of agriculture products.

We encourage you to participate in this program that is administered by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Applications are available at the County Extension Office.

To Mow Weedy Pastures

If your pasture is weedy, then get out the mower. There are two good reasons for this; one it eliminates the production of weed seeds and two, it removes manure forage which lets plants send out new and tender growth. But, before you mow, you should graze the pasture heavily. With grazing you can utilize all the available feed. The animals eat some weeds, but they also eat some of the tall grasses that would be wasted by mowing. Remember to mow closely... 2 to 3 inches. And instead of trashing the clippings, save them. Many farmers recover enough hay from pasture mowings to winter their cattle.

To Observe National Farm Safety Week

The proclamation of September 20-26 as the 44th Annual National Farm Safety Week is very important during this busy corn harvest and fall grain planting season.

This year's theme for Farm Safety Week, "Farm Safety Makes Good Sense", stresses the significant financial advantage of investing time and effort into preventing injury and illness on the farm, especially during time of economic stress.

American agriculture has helped to make us a land of plenty. But the providers of this abundance often are seriously injured or killed while working to feed and clothe us. In 1986 such mishaps resulted in about 1,700 deaths and 170,000 disabling injuries, according to National Safety Council estimates. Agriculture continued to have one of the highest accident death rates (per 100,000 workers) among major industries in the U.S.

Let's practice safe habits everyday.

To Check Water Supplies

Quality drinking water is a great asset on the farm as well as in the urban areas. Some farmers may be having trouble with high bacterial count or high nitrates in their well water supply. These are difficult problems to correct. However, in many cases the trouble comes from surface water getting into the well.

We urge all rural residents to check their wells and be sure that surface water is diverted away from the well area. This is especially true if the well is located downgrade from farm buildings or from where livestock or poultry wastes have been scattered.

Commercial laboratories are available to test the water for contaminants. Most importantly, keep surface water away from the well area at all times.

The Cooperative Extension Service is an affirmative action, equal opportunity educational institution.

FARM FORUM OUR READERS WRITE

Editor,

Very soon the US Senate will consider the nomination of Robert Bork to the US Supreme Court. This will be the first opportunity to have a decent, God-fearing majority in the high court in decades. For many years the court was anti-God, pro-abortion, and soft on hard criminals. When Robert Bork was nominated to the US Court of Appeals five years ago, the American Bar Association gave him its very highest rating. He was confirmed by the US Senate unanimously. While on the second highest court of America he made 400 decisions and not one was overturned by the US Supreme Court. But now the ultra-liberal elements of this country are crying foul. The pro-abortionists, the National Education Association (NEA) the gay community, and the American Civil Liberties Union are fighting desperately to keep Bork from being confirmed. The letters were running two to one against this fine man with the highest of integrity. I would like to see a flood of letters mailed to our US Senators, especially to Senator Arlen Spector, R-PA, who is on the Senate Judiciary Committee and he hasn't made up his mind yet. New Jersey residents should write to Senator Joe Biden D-NJ, who is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. If possible write to both senators from your state. Urge a rapid confirmation of Judge Robert Bork. Hopefully he will be confirmed and abortion will be found to be unconstitutional which it is. A chance like this may not come again for a long time. This may affect the country more than the next presidential election. So spend the time and write the letter. Write to Honorable Senator (name), U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510. Write by September 15, please. Thank you from all the unborn babies.

Dan Martin, Jr.
Cumberland County

PS - Just think, if abortion is outlawed, how much more milk will be needed by those millions of additional babies.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

IN THE LAND OF NOD

September 13, 1987

Background Scripture: Genesis 4: 1-16.
Devotional Reading: 1 John 3: 11-18.

I've never written before on the story of Cain and Abel that I haven't concentrated on Cain's jealousy and violence toward his brother or his eternally loaded question: ". . . am I my brother's keeper?" But this time I want to direct your attention to a portion of the story that is often overlooked and neglected: the consequences for Cain.

Condemned by God to be a "fugitive" and "wanderer," Cain cries out: "My punishment is greater than I can bear" (4:13). Cain fears that he will be a target for violence wherever he goes — how interesting that God assures him, "Not so! If anyone slays Cain, vengeance shall be taken on him sevenfold." Genesis goes on to tell us: "And the Lord put a mark on Cain lest any who came upon him should kill him" (4:15).

THE MARK OF CAIN

What does all this mean? No one can say for sure, but there are various interpretations of this story and its significance. Some have regarded it as meaning that, despite his heinous crime, Cain was still "special" to the Lord. Others have interpreted God's response as a way of prolonging Cain's punishment. But to me, it is essentially about judgement and redemption.

Cain has sinned — jealousy, anger, resentment, violence, deception — and according to God's judgement, there will be consequences to pay. Even if Cain is still "special" in God's sight, as some have suggested, God will not set aside these consequences. (If God had slain Cain on the spot for this cold-blooded murder, we would have a good proof-text for capital punishment — but he didn't!)

So, Cain is condemned to live with his sin. Life will be hard for him from this time forth, but not impossible. With God's "mark upon him, he can still do something worthwhile with his life. And Genesis tells us, "Then Cain . . . dwelt in the land of Nod, east of Eden" (4:16).

Isn't that where all of us dwell — because of sin, no longer in Eden, but "east" of it in the land of Nod where we may still know God's redemption while living with the consequences of our sins, mistakes and failures? In that sense, perhaps all of us wear "the mark of Cain," a symbol that reminds us of both God's judgement and his redeeming love.

Order No. 4 Class I Milk Price $14.30 For October

ALEXANDRIA, VA — Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Joseph D. Shine today announced a Class I milk price of $14.30 per hundredweight for October 1987. This price is up 10 cents from September but is 6 cents below last October's Class I price.

Mr. Shine announced a Class II milk price of $11.39 per hundredweight for August 1987 and a butterfat differential of 17.0 cents for the month. The Class II price was up 17 cents from the previous month, while the butterfat differential decreased one-tenth of a cent.

The October 1987 Class I price and the August 1987 Class II price are based on the August 1987 Minnesota-Wisconsin manufacturing milk price of $11.27 per hundredweight at a 3.5 percent butterfat content.

The USDA reported that the wholesale price of Grade A butter at Chicago for August was $1.4812 per pound and the nonfat dry milk price was $.7987 per pound, f.o.b. plants in the Chicago area.

WILL IT PAY TO HARVEST THE CORN THIS YEAR....?

Predicting corn prices is not an easy task. Regardless of market prices... wouldn't you like to be making more money?

AeroDry Grain Management has developed a system for you to make more money on your crop... regardless of market prices.

The AeroDry system allows you to store and dry your own crop on the farm. You don't pay the elevator for storing or drying - you make their profit.

The AeroDry system uses natural fan forced air, controlled by computer, to dry your corn. There's no high heat to "cook" the quality out of your crop.

The natural air process provides less shrink and higher test weights, while saving up to 75% on energy costs.

Whether you're modifying existing bins or installing completely, AeroDry Grain Management will allow you to sell your crop when you want - without moisture dockage.

Farm proven from the midwest to the east coast - AeroDry is FARM TECHNOLOGY FOR FARM PROFIT.

30 YEARS AGO
THIS WEEK

— Average prices received by Pennsylvania farmers for eggs and hay showed sharp increases during the month ended Aug. 15, according to Federal-State surveys announced Friday by the State Department of Agriculture.

The advances sent the Pennsylvania index of prices received for all principal products up seven points or three percent. The index now stands at 250 percent of the 1910-14 base level, the survey shows.

— Gov. George M. Leader Friday said that Northeastern Pennsylvania dairy farmers could expect a 10 percent increase in their milk checks thanks to the work of the Northeastern Pennsylvania Dairy Farmers Committee which he appointed in October of last year.

— One of the newest innovations, and one of the most controversial, in the dairy business is the use of the milking parlor and loose housing.

The practice was originated in California where the milk climate allows the cows to be outside all year round with a minimum of shelter. However, it has now spread and been accepted throughout the country.

In Lancaster County the long barn with stanchions still is the favorite and is the practice recommended by the Pennsylvania State University. But some dairymen in the county have switched over to the new system.

— Pennsylvania poultry organizations this week are scouring the state's chicken farms for entries in the annual "Poultry Woman of the Year" contest conducted throughout the Northeast by the Northeastern Poultry Producers.

Savage-Leigh Maryland's Outstanding Senior Breeder

The Savage-Leigh prefix has been in existence since 1945 when three brothers, Leroy, Melvin and Kenneth Savage purchased the first purebreds from the Naval Academy herd. Over the next 15 years many purebred young females were imported from Canada. In the early 1960's the brothers became a member of the Astronaut syndicate and the bull was used extensively since then until the present, in the herd. The Astronaut bull crossed well on the herd with this strong Canadian influence.

The herd consists of over 450 purebred Holsteins with a milking herd of around 200. Their 1986 herd average is 19,490 pounds of milk, 724 pounds of fat. Their May 1987 classification shows a BAA of 103%.

The Savage-Leigh herd is having a significant impact on the breed through annual production sales, consignments and private treaty sales, primarily through the sale of females. In recent years, Savage-Leigh cattle have topped a number of state and county sales. The herd is known and respected for its type which includes three grand champions at the Maryland State Fair and two at the Maryland State Holstein Show. Savage-Leigh bred cattle have been grand at regional and national shows as well, including the New York State Fair, Eastern States and Western National.

Some of the recent outstanding individuals to come out of the Savage-Leigh herd, Savage-Leigh East Star Grace, Excellent 94 and nominated All-American two years in a row; Savage-Leigh Magic Amy-Twin, Excellent 95, All-American nomination and another cow they developed, Calder Nash's Leader, Excellent 92, are among some of their most noted individuals.

Currently, the herd is owned and operated by Melvin who is one of the three original brothers and his two sons, Wayne and Dennis. Wayne and Denny's children, the third generation of the Savage-

Farm Philosophy

By Newton Bair

Berries are berries, and if they can be stuffed into pies, jelled into jam, or squashed into juice, we pick'em. The Blueberries, Strawberries, Blackberries, and Raspberries are over for the season, and what's left? Elderberries.

The thicket where the elderberries grew got more jungle-like every year. Lying in the hollow, between the hill behind the barn and the high woods, it thrived on the run-off from two slopes, and kept the deep topsoil tied down with cross-stitched roots. The trouble was, the rich soil could be growing something better.

Over the years, the thicket has been a haven for groundhogs, and a hiding place for other critters that don't like to be seen when you're carrying a gun. Heifers liked to hid their new-born calf in it, just to play hard-to-get. We once found a missing sow with her brood of nine pigs, comfortably holed up in the densest part of the thicket. She knew it was only temporary, and needed little coaxing to return with her brood to the source of feed and comfort of her pen.

The hired man wasn't above slipping into the shade of the thicket for an afternoon nap, while the plow team rested. There was no flowing water, but the ground was always moist and cool. Turtles seemed to love the place, and an occasional snapper was caught for use in turtle soup. We were personally acquainted with some exotically colored box turtles, who lent their flat bellies for carving initials and dates with a pocket knife. One had the date Mar. 1927, and the initial N.B. The carver was ten years old.

But now that the elderberries are ripe, the thicket takes on new meaning. Kids love to pick the bunches, especially when they are ripe and full, and the birds haven't found them yet.

Mama was agreeable to making a pie or two, if someone else would pick them, shuck off the stems, and deliver the clean berries to the kitchen. They were not her favorite pie filling - they took too much sugar and they stained all the utensils, including the pickers hands. But you can't be choosy this time of year.

If the Kids get too carried away and deliver more than enough for a couple of pies, there's always elderberry jelly. The color can't be matched by any other fruit, especially when it drips on the tablecloth or on Pop's sunday shirt. It's royal hue can still be spotted on the porch floor, where someone dropped a fresh jar and the lid popped off.

A few quart jars of elderberries were canned each year, in spite of Mamas' protest that they take up more room than they're worth. They never make it through the winter though, without ending up in a pie.

The year of the Turtle also marked the end of the Elderberry patch. The harvest was good, but Mama would have no more of those purple beads that left their stain on everything. So, Papa decided to make wine.

The old wooden barrel was hidden in the barn cellar and nearly forgotten, until Uncle George, on one of his regular Sunday visits, found it while we were at Church. He was a regular Sunday morning visitor for a while, until he got careless and left the siphon run and emptied the barrel on the barn floor. Finis. The End. No more elderberries.

Papa decided that the thicket must go.

The next week we began the backaching labor of grubbing out the bushes, exposing soil that was too rich for such an humble crop anyway. More valuable crops were raised there over the years, but none that ever sparked the imagination and memories like the old Elderberry patch.

Jersey Winners Named At Maryland State Fair

BY GINGER SECRIST MYERS
Adams Co. Correspondent

TIMONIUM, Md. — Dorcus Bonafield and C.J. Klinger, Bona-Kling Farm, Centreville, MD, have never won a class at the Jersey show at the Maryland State Fair. That is, never before until last Friday when their Three-Yr. Old cow, Bona-Kling Fairy Beacon, won her class, was chosen Senior and Grand Champion of the show, was the Total Performance winner, and was also selected as the best Maryland Owned & Bred Jersey of the show.

All this from a cow that Dorcus Bonafield, a retired military officer, hadn't even planned to exhibit. It was Dr. Lee Majeski who spied "Fairy" during a Queen Anne county youth judging practice held at the Bona-Kling Farm. It wasy Majeski who persuaded Dorcus to fill out the entry form for the show. He hand delivered the entry form that was due that very day. Majeski also suggested that Bonafield contact Dan Vosburg at Pintail Point Holstein Farm to arrange for Dan to take "Fairy" in with Pintail Point's showstring. Vosburg was on the halter of the Grand Champion.

"Fairy" is scored EX (90) and sired by Valleystream Silver Beacon. At 2-01 in 357 days she made 13,050 pounds of milk, 5.3% test, and 700 pounds of butterfat. She is currently bred to A-Nine Top Brass. Following her win in Maryland, "Fairy" is scheduled to be shown at the PA All-American in Harrisburg in September and the All-American Jersey Show and Jersey Jug Futurity Show in Louisville, KY, in November.

Following as the Reserve Senior Champion and Reserve Grand Champion was the first place Five-Yr. Old, Huronia Destiny Tammy. She was exhibited by John Stiles and Sons, Westminster, MD, a family name that is synonymous with Maryland Jerseys. "Tammy" is a daughter of Lenniskillen Destiny and already has several county show wins to her credit.

In the heifer competition, JRS Volunteer Britini, exhibited by Janet and Randy Stiles, Gaithersburg, MD, picked up the trophy for Junior Champion. A flashy winner in the Senior Yearling class, this Mayfield Volunteer daughter was also Junior Champion at the Maryland State Jersey Field earlier this summer. The judge granted this heifer correctness of feet and legs over the Reserve Junior Champion.

Reserve Junior Champion went to the first place Senior Calf, Enniskillen Silver Mayring, shown by Danny Seversen, Dover, Delaware. Seversen, who owns 12 head of Jerseys as youth projects, purchased this heifer at the International Jersey Extravaganza Sale held at Heron Run Farm, Max Spann, in mid-July. Since then, she has won at several shows including being named Junior Champion at the Delaware State Fair.

Official judge at this year's show was Harry Mykrantz from Wooster, Ohio.

Individual Class Winners were as follows:

G-4626

Either way, a strong dollar return.

Take your choice. Or, better yet, take both. You'll be planting some of the best 114-116 day corn.

G-4543. The earlier of this two-hybrid team, G-4543 looks as good as it yields. Strong roots and solid stalks help speed harvest. An excellent hybrid under moisture stress, G-4543 also has the ability to "flex" ear size in response to good growing conditions. A top choice for large ears packed with quality grain.

G-4626. With more of a tendency to hide its ears, this hybrid lets the combine be the final judge. You'll like how fast G-4626 emerges in the spring and how long it stands in the fall. Responds well to high populations. Good stay-green and plant health are evidence of G-4626's strong disease resistance.

County Extension Agents Receive Service Awards

UNIVERSITY PARK — Several staff members in Penn State's College of Agriculture recently received Awards from the National Association of County Agricultural Agents at the association's annual meeting in August.

Jay W. Irwin, Lancaster County Cooperative Extension director, Arnold G. Lueck, retired extension agent in Lancaster County, and Jacob E. Guffey, Bradford County extension director, received Distinguished Service Awards. Eugene Schurman, Indiana County associate extension agent, received an NACAA Achievement Award.

Jay Irwin was recognized for his leadership role in combating the avian influenza epedemic that hit Lancaster County in 1983 and 1984. The epidemic was diagnosed in April 1983 and spread to more than 400 flocks. About 16 million birds were destroyed and the lives of thousands were affected. Irwin worked with producers, veterinarians, industry associations and government agencies for strict sanitation procedures and educational programs.

In addition to conducting poultry programs, Irwin assists clients with fiscal planning and manure management systems and coordinates county 4-H programs. He received a B.S. degree in agricultural Economics from Penn State in 1949 and in 1985 received the Distinguished Service Award from USDA, the highest honor USDA awards to extension staff.

Arnold Lueck was recognized for his successful program in agronomic and horticultural crops. Emphasizing profitability, he worked with clients on the quality and yield of their crops as well as helping them develop speciality and cash crops to supplement and diversify farm income. He worked closely with county commodity associations and included pest control management, fertility practices, and soil and water conservation in his programs.

Active in many community service groups, Lueck is a member of the Pennsylvania and National Associations of County Agricultural Agents, several professional and honorary fraternities, the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council, the State Horticultural Society, and the Master Corn Growers Association.

Jacob Guffey was recognized for developing a successful county-wide dairy program in mastitis control and nutrition, including a pilot project that led to the initiation of the Somatic Cell Testing Program. The Bradford County dairy program includes milker schools for dairy personnel, industry seminars, newsletters and individual consulting, as well as leadership training to 4-H members and young farm couples. Guffey's assistance has resulted in significant increases in dairy income for county participants.

Guffey received his B.S. and M.S. degrees in dairy science from Penn State and has done post graduate work at both Penn State and Mansfield State universities in financial management, computer programming, dairy science and other agricultural subjects. He is a member of the Pennsylvania and National Associations of County Agriculture Agents, Epsilon Sigma Phi fraternity and the Grange.

Eugene Schurman received the Achievement Award for his dairy and beef programs for Indiana County. As the dairy and livestock coordinator, his county and regional programs have emphasized dairy nutrition, mastitis and udder health, dairy calf and heifer management, and improving beef cattle reproduction for producers and 4-H clubs. He also is the county extension computer coordinator and has helped to incorporate computer technology into many county programs.

The NACAA Achievement Award honors agents with less than 10 years of service with extension. A 1974 master's degree graduate of dairy science at Penn State, Schurman has been with Penn State Cooperative Extension Service for six years.

Honored in the Association's "Search for Professional Excellence" program were extension agents Robert Rugaber in Butler County, Eugene Schurman in Indiana County, Barry Nelson in Jefferson County, and Charles Replogle in Alleghney County.

Gay Ridge Cow Wins Holstein Champion For Second Year

BY SUE CROW
Maryland Correspondent

Gay Ridge Holsteins from Ijamsville, Maryland had a powerful string of Holsteins at the Maryland State Fair held in Timonium, Maryland. They placed first in six classes as well as winning the Senior Champion, Reserve Senior Champion, Grand Champion, Reserve Grand Champion and Supreme Champion of all breeds. They also received the Premier Exhibitor Banner for 1987.

C Wynfield Marla, a 7-year-old cow, won the grand champion rosette as well as winning the first place ribbon in the cow 6-years-and-over class, and senior champion. She is the same cow that won here last year in the 5-year-old cow class and went away with the grand champion trophy. She is a Stonetown Instructor Daughter and was the Best Udder and Total Performance winner for her class.

C Hanson Prestar Mona Lisa was the reserve grand and the reserve senior champion of the show. She is also owned by Gay Ridge Holsteins and is a Leadfield Prestar Daughter. Judge Papageorge said that both these cows were worthy to be at anyone's farm with the placings being very close. Lisa was the first placed senior 2-year-old.

Norman Voss Jr. took the junior champion rosette with Vossmon Tempo Gloria-Twin. This cow from Clayton, Delaware is a Roybrook Tempo daughter. The reserve junior champion went to C. Bennie Frye. Both these Holsteins were senior yearling heifers placing first and second respectively.

A new class was added to show this year, a competition between all the breeds for a supreme champion of the fair. It was a class years may lessen the tax bite somewhat. However, both Jenkins and Dennison said the best strategy may be to hold off dispersing for several years in the hope that, as many tax analysts predict, Congress will restore the capital gains exclusion to the code.

Tax Changes

In other areas as well, the changes have greatly reduced the options farmers have had to manipulate taxable income. Alternatives, where they do exist, may not be practical for other reasons.

For instance, not being able to excluse a portion of cull cow receipts may add $10,000 to the taxable income of some dairymen. The change shifts the tax advantage to farmers who purchase replacement heifers, but few advisors are suggesting that dairymen should abandon raising their own replacements as a result.

On the other hand, the nex tax code may change farmers' thinking on the purchase of new equipment. Under the old code, investment in new machinery or facilities was attractive, in part, because of the tax write-offs it produced, according to farm advisors. These included both rapid depreciation under the Accelerated Cost Recovery System and investment tax credit — through which taxpayers could apply up to 10 percent of the value of a newly purchased asset to the bottom line of their returns to reduce taxes owed dollar for dollar. In some cases, farmers overinvested out of concern for not paying taxes, their advisors now argue.

Under the new code, Dennison said, "You can make a (buying) decision on the basis of what it will do to your bottom line. You don't make a decision as to whether you can save several hundred dollars in taxes."

Although the elimination of some of these shelters may simplify somewhat the task of figuring taxes, Congress passed other provisions that may make tax preparation more of a chore than ever before.

One item in particular — dealing with what the Internal Revenue Service calls "preproductive expenditures" — has gotten a lot of attention in farm circles. These are expenses associated with the development of an asset over several years. On dairy farms, raising replacement heifers falls into this category.

Farmers are accustomed to simply lumping feed, veterinary bills and the other costs of raising heifers together with the expenses of the cow herd. Indeed, most dairymen would be hard pressed to break out just their feed costs for heifers, let alone the percentage of overhead such as electricity or depreciation on the forage chopper attributable to the young stock, according to farm management consultants.

Under the new law, dairy farmers can continue this practice; the alternative is to assign the costs to a capital account that they can begin to depreciate when the heifers enter the milking string. However, the choice to expense rather than capitalize will have several consequences: locking a dairyman into the use of the slower, straight-line Alternative Depreciation Schedule on new assets, for instance, and eliminating the consideration of income from cattle sales as capital gains.

Moreover, expenses deducted annually will be subject to recapture as ordinary income when the heifers are sold, Jenkins notes. This requirement will force all dairymen — not just those capitalizing the costs — to keep track of heifer-raising expenses, he said.

Tax advisors anticipate being able to employ simplified inventory values for these costs. However, they warn that farmers, particularly those whose figures differ significantly from the industry average, may be forced to document how they arrived at their values.

Jenkins characterized this provision — and another one requiring the use of a mid-quarter convention in figuring depreciation on capital purchases for the year if 40 percent or more of those assets are bought in the last quarter — as "nuisances." The IRS won't collect any more taxes as a result, he said, but dairy farmers will spend more time keeping records and filling out forms — or paying someone to do it for them.

On the other hand, some farm management consultants see a silver lining to some of the changes. Bob Luening, an ag economist at the University of Wisconsin, said, "It would do a lot of dairy farmers a lot of good to know what it costs them to raise replacement stock."

The changes point to another lesson: the need for farmers, or at least their tax preparers, to stay abreast of new provisions. The choice on which way to treeat preproductive expenditures will be made on 1987 returns and essentially be irrevocable, according to Jenkins. The IRS will assume annual expensing if no choice is indicated, he added.

Fewer and fewer farmers prepare their own returns. Nevertheless, it is important that they know enough about taxes to at least ask good questions of those who do their returns, according to Luening.

The questions likely will continue to change. Farm groups such as PFA already are lobbying for a change in the preproductive expenditure rules.

FARMER Fundraiser

state legislative candidates who are supportive of farmers in the upcoming elections.

"The goal of FARMER is to elect a general assembly which is sympathetic to agriculture," said Pat Wolff member of FARMER. "FARMER contributed money to candidates for the state house and state senate seats in three elections since it was begun in 1981."

Begun in 1981 as a political action committee to allow members to pool their finances to help "friends of agriculture" get elected, FARMER has supported 58 candidates for the state house and senate in 1982, 61 in 1984, and 70 in 1986. All but one FARMER-supported candidate was successful in his election bid.

FARMER helps only those candidates who have proven through their voting record on agricultural issues that their philosophy mirrors the beliefs of PFA. Those political action groups who work against agricutural interests need checked and balanced and FARMER does that with its contributions. The opinions of County Farmers' Association and individual FARMER members are also solicited by PFA before contributions are made. FARMER is a bipartisan organization and political party is not considered.

Wagner is originally from Long Island, New York and has been involved in land use planning and natural resource planning throughout northeastern United States.

The American Farmland Trust is a private conservancy founded in 1980 and today has 45,000 members nationwide with offices in California, in the Midwest and in Massachusetts.

"One question that I get asked a lot is that 'Why should we protect farmland?' Agriculture is a very important, viable industry. Agriculture is not only crucial to the local economy it is crucial to the state and national economy as well," said Wagner.

With massive surpluses in the farming industry it is difficult, according to Wagner, to convince legislators of the importance of preserving farmland.

"Farming is an industry just as hi-tech is an industry and if farmers go out of business, local, state and the national economy will suffer a severe loss and legislators must see this," said Wagner.

Wagner pointed out that as farmers go out of business that the businesses which they support will begin to dwindle from the loss of business.

"As individual farmers go out of business there will be less demand for services and goods. There will be no one to support these businesses. There will be no one to pick-up milk, there will be fewer veterinarians and machinery prices will increase dramatically," explained Wagner.

Preserving farmland means stablizing the farming industry and as a result that will bolster local economy which strengthens the state and national economy.

Presently there is a very successful farmland preservation program in Montgomery County, Maryland. Over 50,000 acres have already been purchased in Maryland. In other programs, Massachusetts' program has preserved 20,000 acres in 200 farms and in Connecticut 10,000 acres have been purchased in 60 farms and 20 of these farms were all signed up for the program in 1986. The programs are very popular, however in many cases there is a lack of money to purchase more acres.

Through these types of programs the government provides money to purchase development rights from farmers. There are certain requirements and not every farmer can qualify. The farm must be productive so that its preservation would be a contribution to the agricultual industry.The price is determined per acre on the value of the land for development which of course is higher than the value of the land as being used for farming. The farmer receives that price per acre for however many acres he wishes to signup with the program.

"The farmer must understand when he signs-up with the program that he will never be able to develop that land. He may under some restrictions put a dwelling on for an offspring or for laborers. He may sell to someone else however it will be under the same restrictions. The advantage to the farmer will be that he can continue farming and that he will have immediate capital to pay off debts, expand his operation or buy machinery. This bolsters local economy," said Wagner.

Last year in Boston legislators were not convinced that $25 million should be budgeted for their state farmland preservation program. However, farmers and supporters of the program educated them on the importance of the program. Not only did Massachusetts lawmakers approve the budget, but they were so impressed with the program that they increased the amount to $30 million.

Voters will be asked on November 3 to approve the proposed program for Pennsylvania. If passed this program will be the largest in the country.

"The $100 million program will be a signal to farmers that the state wants to support them. It will also be a signal to other states which do not yet have a program that this is what the people want," said Wagner.

Pennsylvania lost 900,000 acres of farmland between 1975 and 1985 and every six months Pennsylvania loses an area of farmland larger than the city of Pittsburgh. In 1960 there were 106,000 farms. The latest estimate is 56,500, according to figures compiled by the Vote 'YES' For Farmland Committee.

Anderson Chosen

County. When Hurricane Agnes ravaged the state in 1972 he was transferred to Bradford County for a year before being sent to Ann Arber, Michigan. After a year in Michigan Anderson returned to Lancaster County to take the position with the Adult Farmer Program.

"The Adult Farmer Program is similar to the extension position. In both you must deal with a variety of problems. One day you might be with a farmer working on the proper cattle ration mix, the next day looking at ways to improve soil conservation or improve a dairy breeding program. In the Adult Farmer Program I was able to work on an individual basis and I liked that very much," said Anderson.

"What I enjoyed most were the friendships with the farmers in that area. They were very trusting and always willing to try something no matter what it was because they were very committed to agriculture. They were super people to work with."

One of Anderson's goals as county agronomist is to increase crop yields. Although Lancaster County produces more agriculturally than almost all the other counties combined, Anderson says through proper management practices even more yield can be realized.

"I have seen fields which are not producing what they could be. There are some good, sound basic management practices and apparently they need to be repeated some times," said Anderson. Anderson cited corn as a crop which could reach a higher production level within the county.

"There are many factors which affect crop production. But there is one message which must get across to people and that is planting time. A lot of people plant one to two weeks after the right planting time and it does make difference. Also, on many plots we have sampled the plantings are too sparse and people need to have their machines calibrated. There are also some problems with weed control in scattered areas. This pertains to all crops and not just corn. The date of planting and the rate of planting is of prime importance," said Anderson.

Higher crop production means more nutrients being utilized from the soil and nutrient management will be of top priority in Anderson's new position. Nutrient management and its affects on water quality has become a priority statewide and nationwide with the creation of the Chesapeake Bay Project. And although Anderson's New Holland satellite office was supported by funding made available in 1986 to study the county's water condition, he was working on water quality as early as 1979, in the Adult Farmer Program. "Since then, with the new data made available through geological studies, I have changed some of my ideas. I had always believed nitrates ended up in the water through run-off primarily and now it has been determined that nitrates actually filter through the soil and into the ground water to find their way into streams and that changes the way we handle the problem entirely," said Anderson. Water quality is not only the concern of farmers, but of everyone. But not only farmers are guilty of contamination through the buildup of nitrates and run-off from herbicides and pesticides, everyone is and according to Anderson more research needs to be done and steps need to be taken to protect our environment.

"It will be difficult to show a farmer who has been spreading manure on his fields for years and who has found success in that, there is a better way when they can't see what the problem is. We have to show them through data, through research, through demonstrations that the same amount of crop can be grown with less manure or with less dollars invested in commercial fertilizer. Some farmers are already finding high nitrate levels in their own water and are having to install expensive nitrate filtering systems," said Anderson.

Anderson has been monitoring 22 test plots to determine what the proper level of nutrients is. The idea is to apply only what is needed for optimum growth and apply it at the moment when the plant will absorb the nutrients before the fertilizer has the opportunity to filter into the ground water. Of the 22 plots he said their applications appear to be very close, however, the not all the crops have been harvested.

Anderson is anxious to join the staff as county agronomist, however he regrets not being able to see his work at the New Holland office completed.

"I won't be totally out of touch though. One great thing about our Lancaster County is that all the agents and home economists work together as a team and we all must depend on each other to share information," said Anderson.

Anderson and his wife Diana have three children, Scott, Jonathon, and Amy. They reside on Bergman Road in New Holland.

Snyder will also be eligible to apply for aid under the disaster declarations.

The emergency declaration allows farmers whose crops have been damaged by the hot and dry conditions to apply for federally subsidized loans and other help.

State agriculture officials said Chester, Delaware, Lancaster, Fulton, Bedford, Franklin and Somerset counties are also eligible to apply for the assistance because they neighbor areas in other states that have received the disaster declaration.

I think at this point it covers all that the governor requested," said Ron Jury, a spokesman for Gov. Robert P. Casey, who had to formally seek the disaster declarations.

This is the second consecutive year that dry coonditions have resulted in losses for southcentral Pennsylvania farmers.

In 1986, York County alone suffered $47 million in losses, with most of the damage occuring in the southern half near the Maryland border.

pound was paid by the First National Bank of Loysville for the 135 lb. market lamb owned by Melanie Brookhart of Millerstown. Another record price for the reserve 4-H grand champion maket lamb was paid by Farmers Trust of New Bloomfield and Carlisle. The bank paid $3.20 per pound for the reserve champion lamb owned by Dawn Curtis of Landisburg, Harry Fahnestock of Newport bought the FFA champion market lamb for $1.40 per pound which was owned by Dee Curtis of Landisburg. The reserve FFA champion market lamb, owned by Mike Brookhart of Millerstown, brought $1.22 per pound from Sam Wagner Electric, Elliottsburg.

Bobby Lowe of Shermans Dale received a record price of $4.50 per pound for his 225 lb. 4-H grand champion market hog. The successful buyer was Sunday's Mill Farm, Carlisle. Another record setting price for the 4-H reserve grand champion was paid by Juniata Concrete of Newport and Mifflintown. Juniata paid $4.10 for the 215 lb. reserve champ owned by Holly McLaren of Shermans Dale.

Hatfield Packing Company bought nine hogs at the sale, including Dee Curtis' champion FFA hog. She received $2.05 per pound for her 233 pound hog. Scott Smith of Millerstown received $1.95 per pound for his reserve champion FFA hog. The buyer was Hatfield Packing Co.

Venessa Williams of New Bloomfield sold her grand champion 4-H market goat, weighing 75 pounds, to Katy Lou Sunset Farms of Wilmington, Delaware for $1.50 per lb.

Adam Williams of New Bloomfield received $1.55 per pound for his reserve grand champion 4-H market goat from Lyter's Autoparts, New Bloomfield and Carlisle. Farmers Trust of New Bloomfield bought the FFA champion market goat owned by Rich Radle of Elliottsburg. The 55-pound champ brought $1.05 per pound. The highest priced market goat, owned by Gary Kreiser of Landisburg, brought $4.40 per pound and was purchased by the Agronomy Center, Thompsontown.

Henry's Meat Market of Duncannon was the successful bidder for the 4-H champion pen of meat rabbits, owned by Nancy Stydinger of Elliottsburg.

Allan Stydinger's champion pen of three meat rabbits was purchased by Jay Campbell, Livestock Hauling. The purchase price was $65.

A total of five steers, 21 market lambs, 11 goats, two pens of rabbits, and 50 market hogs were auctioned off by Art Kling of Landisburg.

All animals sold were 1987 4-H and FFA projects. A total of 60 buyers bought animals on August 22, Harris said.

Ezra Good of Hatfield Packing Co. and Robert Finkenbinder of Country Butcher Shop in Carlisle both commented that the Perry County 4-H and FFA Livestock Sale has more community support than any other youth sale they have attended this year.

The 64 participating buyers is a new high for the Perry County sale, Harris said.

"This sale, and the livestock shows last Wednesday and Thursday, were very successful due to the volunteer work by 4-H leaders, FFA advisors, parents and many business representatives who just wanted to help," Harris said. "Included in the list of many peope are the board members of the Perry County Community Fair Association."

If cattle could talk, they would probably cry out and say "don't shut me in!" If we observe them carefully, we see that their actions convey the same message.

When given the choice between a well-bedded pen and an outside lot, chances are, they will choose to be outside, even on cold days. When cold rains and cold winds arrive, they'll probably seek shelter.

As we make plans to house our herds this winter let us heed their preferences — for their sake and for ours. Don't crowd them into wet, dark, drafty, poorly-ventilated pens. Remember, they like to be out in the sunshine, where the air is fresh. Remember, we are also trying to raise growthy heifers that will be healthy enough to produce well and stay in the herd long enough to return us a good profit in their lifetime.

Therefore, be sure your housing provides cattle with lots of fresh air. That's so important for healthy lungs and for healthy, productive animals. Be sure the barn is well ventilated, but not drafty. Perhaps the front of pens can open up into an outside lot. Or, it may be necessary to install a well designed ventilation system (more on that, later).

The barn does not have to be kept warm. However, if it is cold, be sure it is well bedded, dry and draft free. If frozen water bowls are a concern, consider the frost-free bowls that have become available in recent years. Another alternative is to use heated bowls or systems that supply continuously running water.

To keep bedded packs drier, feed and water cattle away from the bedded area, and avoid overcrowding of animals.

Calf Housing

As you group cattle, attempt to group them by size. This is especially true with young calves.

For recently weaned calves, the number per group should be limited to about 3 to 5. The smaller the group, the less stress there is for calves as they adjust to group living, and perhaps also to changes in ration and changes in how they are fed and watered. Preferably, these young calves should not be housed with older herdmates, until they have had time to develop some immunity against disease organisms that are present in the herd. A super hutch-like structure can be beneficial in helping calves go through this transition period with a minimum of setbacks.

Where calves are housed in cow stables, or with older animals, it is advisable to pull fresh air in over the calves, without creating a draft, and exhausting it over the older cattle — for two reasons. 1) The calves will be healthier if they do not have to breathe the germ-laden air of older cattle. 2) Because calves give off less body heat than cows, the calf section of the barn is apt to be cooler. Pulling warm, moist air from the cows into the cooler calf section will cause the warm air to condense, thus increasing the humidity level in the calf area, thereby causing more respiratory problems in calves.

If calves are located near ventilation inlets, it may be necessary to protect them from cold drafts. Drafts can be of two forms. 1) Calves being located directly in the air stream or 2) cold air dropping down onto the calves.

Solid walls on two or three sides of a pen can provide "wind breaks" for calves; it gives them a corner to retreat to when they want to escape from the air stream. Notice that I did not say four sides. One or two sides should be kept open down to the floor level for good air drainage; we don't want an unhealthy, stuffy box.

To help prevent cold air from dropping down on calves, place a hood — perhaps plywood — over part of the pen, providing a sheltered area to which the calf can retreat. Another alternative is to bring air in through inlets at the ceiling level and directing the air out along the ceiling at sufficient velocity to cause it to mix with and become tempered by the warm air at the ceiling level. Once the cold air is warmed up by the ceiling air, it won't drop as a cold draft. However, if the cold air comes in through the inlet too slowly, or if it is directed down along the wall, it won't warm up; the cold air, being heavier than the warm stable air, will then drop and perhaps create a draft. That's why it is so important to adjust inlet openings so they precisely match the amount of air being moved by the fans that are running at that given time. As fans kick on and off, the inlet openings need to change.

Many calves are housed in bank barns. Here again, humidity levels are a concern. We can reduce these problems if we protect calves from the wet stone walls. A feed alley

Fresh Air, Better Health, More Milk

I hope your stables are not characterized by warm, moist, stale air. This can be a problem during the changing weather of spring and fall. It can contribute to a lot of respiratory problems and to the spread of other communicable diseases.

This is a time of the year when a good ventilation system is very valuable. A good system will provide a constant change of air, replacing stale air with fresh air without creating a draft. This minimal exchange can be provided by fans that run continuously, and move 40-50 cfm per 1,000 pounds of body weight.

Additional fans that are controlled by thermostats keep the stable temperature around 50-55 degrees fahrenheit. If the stable temperature approaches freezing, the continuous-running fan can be "throttled down," perhaps with a variable speed switch or by covering up part of the fan opening. Notice I did not say turn it off; it's important to have a constant exchange of air, even on cold days.

During spring and fall, outside temperatures can change drastically from day to day and from hour to hour. Because of this, it is very challenging — almost impossible — to properly adjust a ventilation system manually; if you are not present to adjust the fans and the inlets when the temperature changes (outdoor and indoor), you are either moving too much air or too little air. Chances are the inlets are not properly matched to the number of fans that are running. If the inlets are open too wide, fans will seek air from inlets closest to the fan and dead spots will develop in other parts of the stable. Dead spots can also develop if the openings are not properly distributed and adjusted in all sections of the stable.

For the reasons just discussed, it is easy to understand why a well-designed, automatically-controlled ventilation system is preferred.

Fresh air is a free and precious resource. Let's make good use of it; let us also preserve its quality.

an average of $1250 paid for heifers and cows and an average of $771 bid for eight unweaned calves.

Ringlers' purchase revealed an incomplete lactation record but was listed as producing 3.1 percent butterfat and 3.1 percent protein. Her dam, Pen-Col Glendell Detra-ET was a very good cow with a third year, 365-day lactation totaling 27,550 lbs. of milk at 4.2 percent butterfat.

Two 1985 heifers shared second billing as each went to new owners on bids of $2200:

Gregory A. Coleman consigned Blackcrest Chairman Nora, a daughter of Cal-Clark Board Chairman and who freshened June 11 with a 4.2 percent test; the heifer was purchased by Rodney and Claire Ott of Holsopple. Her dam was listed as plus 181 lbs. for milk and plus 22 lbs. for fat.

A Chapel-Bank Apache daughter consigned by Leon J. Knepper of Berliln sold to Mike and Barbara Stutzman of Friedens. The female's dam had a nine-year lifetime record of 155,067 lbs. of milk at 3.9 percent butterfat.

In the calf offering, Seneca-Ezmar Enhancer Rita-ET, a May 1987 daughter of Glenafton Enhancer, brought the high bid of $1750. She was consigned by Dale and Paula Wack and Ezra and Mary Yoder of Harmony, Pa., and Grantsville, Md. Four of the calf's full brothers have been contracted to bull studs, it was reported.

Only one animal among the more-than-weaned age group failed to bring more than $1000.

Clark A. Yoder auctioneered, with pedigree assistance from Oren C. Bender. Sale chairmen were Dan Carr and Mark Marteeny. Some 300 people attended the event. The Somerset County Holstein Club, sale sponsor, also served a chicken dinner.

Safe Slimming Program

Do you have too much insulation? Your home is not the only place to conserve energy. How you manage your weight determines the efficiency of your own body system. A well-trimmed, well-exercised body is more fuel efficient than an overweight one. Being overweight can also create health problems. Maryetta Dorricott, Delaware County Cooperative Extension Home Economist reminds us that people who are overweight place unnecessary burdens on their hearts and circulation. They also run greater risks of developing diabetes and of developing complications during surgery.

Reasons for being overweight are not the same for everyone, but basically, weight problems occur because of the difference between the food energy — calories — consumed and those worked off in daily living. If we eat too much, the extra calories are stored as fat. The heavier we get the higher our calorie needs are, making it all the harder to reduce within a reasonable length of time.

If you eat 3,500 more calories a day than you need, you gain a pound. As little as an extra 100 calories a day adds up to 700 calories a week. This translates into about an extra pound in 5 weeks. In a year's time you have gained 10 pounds. This is called the "slow creep." But don't be fooled, it's real, it's solid.

Try the well-known "pinch test." If you are able to pinch more than one inch of flesh just above your waist, it may be time to reconsider your eating and exercise habits. Check one of the easily available age/weight/calorie charts to find out how many calories you need daily to maintain your proper weight. Don't be the one in every five people who is overweight. If you fail the "pinch test", contact the Delaware County Cooperative Extension Service of the Penn State University for information on the Safe Slimming program that begins September 21.

PFA Endorses Bork

CAMP HILL — For the first time in its history the nation's largest farm organization has endorsed a nomination to the judiciary.

American Farm Bureau has announced its support for the nomination of Judge Robert H. Bork for Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

American Farm Bureau represents 3.5 million members nationwide including 23,443 families who are members of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA).

Keith Eckel of Clarks Summit, president of PFA and a member of American Farm Bureau's Board of Directors, said, "Judge Bork's record shows he is an eminently qualified jurist who clearly believes in the rule of law and in following established legal precedent." The American Farm Bureau Board of Directors voted to support Judge Bork's nomination during their regular meeting this week in Chicago.

Eckel said, "Judge Bork's decisions reflect Farm Bureau philosophy that the Supreme Court confine itself to interpretation of the Constitution. The court should not perform a legislative function." He added that Farm Bureau leaders across the country will be contacting their Senators to urge support of Bork's nomination.

for the grand champion winners in each respective breed to compete against one another on equal grounds with three judges. John Morris and Buddy Hill joined Harry Papageorge to single out this year's winner. The grand champion Holstein had close competition from the Jersey grand champion owned by Bona-Kling Farm. "We'd like to see this 3-year-old Jersey with a little more age on her for her to win the competition today. She has a beautiful mammary system, but we'd just like to see what it does in a few years," said Judge Papageorge. C Wynfield Marla was this year's recipient of the Richard N. Wills supreme champion dairy cow trophy presented by the Wills Family. The cow's name will be inscribed on this revolving trophy with a replica to be given to each exhibitor.

The Premier Breeder Banner went to Coldsprings Farm owned by the Marlin Hoff family from New Windsor, Maryland.

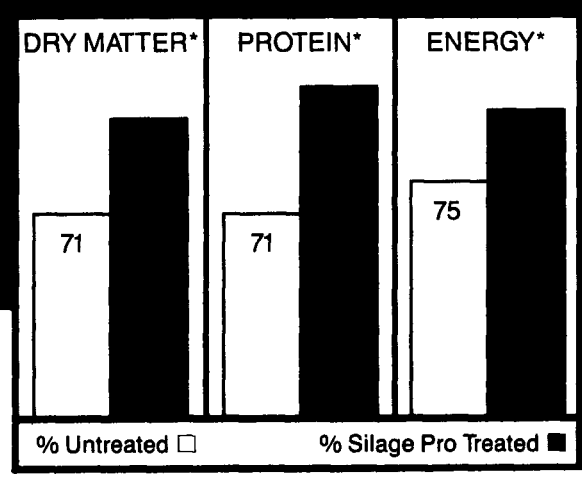
Using Silage Pro™ is like harvesting three extra tons for every twenty.



A brief exercise that can increase your profit margin: Write down the volume of silage you put up last year, and how much of that silage you actually were able to use. Now figure out what retaining 15% more silage would have been worth to you.

That much extra silage is exactly what Silage Pro has proven it can provide. Consistently and economically. On farms just like yours.

Here's how Silage Pro preserves forage quantity and quality

- Enzyme catalysts promote rapid production of lactic acid
- Lactic acid lowers pH quickly and inhibits the growth of harmful spoilage bacteria.
- Because heat is controlled quickly, loss of available protein is minimized.
- Controlled fermentation promotes abundant production of propionic acid, the most effective preservative for haylage and silage. Propionic acid also contributes to greater energy, improved feed efficiency, better animal health and more palatable silage

Increase the value of your silage. Make Silage Pro part of your crop and feed management program, and get more dry matter, more protein and more energy Agway guarantees your silage quality will improve.

Penn State to isolate the virus and possible solutions to the problem.

Over 1600 types of the salmonella virus have been found in avians, mammals and people and since January 1986, 251 strains have been seen in poultry.

Dr. Kradel pointed out that some of the salmonella can only infect one species. If a chicken is infected with the disease that doesn't necessarily mean it will affect humans. When humans do contract the virus, Dr. Benson said, "They are so sick they think they are going to die. After awhile, they realize that they aren't going to die, but they wish they would."

Dr. Benson spoke from experience since he contracted the virus while conducting research with live salmonella.

Three things may befall contaminated poultry. It may die or recover with salmonella completely erased from its body or it may recover but carry the germ which can be transmitted to other poultry.

The virus comes from numerous sources. Chickens can be infected from contaminated feed, water, litter and air. Since dead poultry is often recycled into protein supplement feeds, it is suspected that possibly this could be a carrier to live poultry. Infected breeding hens can infect chicks via the egg. "These sources," Dr. Kradel pointed out, "cause a salmonella cycle in the poultry industry."

In humans, most salmonella outbreaks come from mishandling food. But the public always blames the product because it is not sterile.

Dr. Benson believes that even when eggs have been named the carrier, their original contamination was so small that it would cause no problem to humans unless the food has been improperly prepared and refrigerated which then allows the germ to multiply and spread.

"Dr. Benson said that increased awareness is the most important factor to educate the public that it is not the food, but how food is handled."

"Eggs are a great medium for bacteria to grow," Dr. Charles Benson said. Feces can contaminate egg shells and with time the germ can penetrate the shell and spread into the eternal part of the egg. "Once the organism grows inside the protected shell," Dr. Benson said, "it's a sneaky bug that antibodies can't touch."

The public fears that in some cases the egg yolk may carry the disease that was transmitted by an infected laying hen, but Dr. Benson said, "To date, no data exists that supports ovarium transfer."

He stressed that he doesn't know how many eggs must be cultured before convincing the public that research shows that infected laying hens do not produce infected yolks.

From the scientists' experiments with contaminated poultry, they have found it difficult to discern when it became contaminated. Was it during slaughter, when they were transferred or before? These are questions that the Penn State researchers hope to find as they continue to pool all their individual findings so they have a larger data base.

The scientists pointed out that enormous research must be done to find viable solutions to salmonella enteritidis. And when that happens, the poultry industry will have a lot less to be worry about.

The first thing you need to grow alfalfa.

New Pioneer® brand variety 5432 gives you more green all around. It offers more tonnage, and superior feed value...and that can mean dollars in your pocket.

This new alfalfa variety gets off to a quick start for early harvest opportunities. And with its fast regrowth, chances are you'll get an extra cutting, too.

But Pioneer 5432 doesn't stop with top yields. It also delivers a high potein potential and outstanding palatability for more nutritional value. Which makes it a favorite among dairymen and beef producers alike.

5432 has bred-in toughness. Fine winterhardiness, plus resistance to Phytophthora Root Rot and verticillium wilt make it ideal for highly productive acres where you want a long-term stand.

Green-up your operation with 5432. For more information, talk to your local Pioneer sales representative.

And take a look at this other great alfalfa variety from Pioneer:

526 One of the most winterhardy varieties on the market. It features outstanding resistance to Bacterial Wilt, good resistance to Fusarium Wilt and produces impressive yields. The first cutting is a bit later than with 531 or 5432.

Nest Egg Turns Into A Ducky Adventure

Robert Burleson holds one of the ducklings that he raised from a nest of eggs retrieved from a hayfield in May.

BY SHARON B. SCHUSTER
Maryland Correspondent

New Windsor, Md. — When most folks talk about a 'nest egg for retirement', they are referring to their hard earned savings stashed away for their twilight years. But, when Robert Burleson of New Windsor, Maryland talks about his nest egg, it's something quite different.

His nest egg adventure began during the season's first cutting of hay. The alfalfa was a lush, dark green with delicate purple flowers in bloom. Mr. Burleson's son-in-law, Chuck, climbed on the tractor and made his first round in the field, Mr. Burleson watched as the alfalfa fell into neat rows behind the haybine. Everything was going like clock-work.

Then the drone of the machines died to an idle and Mr. Burleson saw Chuck climb down off of the tractor. When he reached the site, Mr. Burleson saw the disappointment on Chuck's face. At his feet lay a beautiful wild duck that sat on her nest to protect the eight eggs under her now lifeless body.

Farmers are a conscientious lot with great respect for the nature with which they work so closely every day. Chuck said he makes a practice of "scaring up" the wildlife in the fields, like sleeping fawns and ducks on their nests. But this time, he admitted, "I just didn't see her."

The two farmers could have shook their heads and continued their duties, but Mr. Burleson is one retiree who didn't duck responsibility. Carefully scooping up the nest with an old jacket, he placed it in the cab of his truck until it was time to go back to the house for dinner. "I figured they would stay warmer in there than if I took them home." Indeed, the late May sun was magnified through the windshield of the truck and made the inside as warm as an incubator.

When the haymaking was finished, Mr. Burleson placed the eggs in an incubator in the garage of his home. "I turned the eggs every day and brushed them with water to keep the shells moist. I never did this before. I didn't know exactly what to do."

His 'mother hen' instincts turned out to be just the right thing to do. A couple of weeks later, Mr. Burleson returned home after overseeing another long day of haymaking. "It was ten o'clock at night," he explained. "I went into the garage to turn my duck eggs, and I had seven little ducks instead of eggs. One didn't hatch."

He hadn't expected the ducklings to hatch that evening, and wasn't prepared to care for the new arrivals. Son-in-law, Chuck, was sent to a friend's house to borrow a brooder. In less than an hour, the ducklings were cozy warm in the brooder, set at 101 degrees.

"I didn't know what they could eat," said Mr. Burleson. "I gave them some laying mash that we had around." On Chuck's advice, the feed was changed to unmedicated chick starter/grower. He scattered their food on a piece of cardboard on the floor of the brooder, and also put some in a shallow pan of water. He discovered that the ducklings preferred their food to be wet.

In the light of the day, Mr. Burleson admired the downy soft, brown and yellow ducklings. "They fit right in the palm of your hand," he recalls. For about a week, they stayed close to the warmest part of the brooder. "You could just about see them grow," he added.

"Now I understand where that saying, 'Like a duck to water' came from. They were in the water from the first day," he explained. "They would splash in it and swim through it and wet their food in it."

Only one duckling didn't make it through the first week. "It wasn't fully formed when it was hatched," explained Mr. Burleson. The ducklings soon outgrew the brooder, so Mr. Burleson constructed a pen for them behind his house. "I let them stay outside during the days and took them back to the brooder at night," he explained. "After about a week of adjustment to the outdoors, the ducks moved into their pen on a permanent basis.

The approximately 4'x8' pen was made from chicken wire, with the top completely covered. "I put a box in there for them to sleep in, but they didn't use it." A large trash can lid full of water served as their pool.

The ducklings grew so fast that they soon could wade the pool and needed something larger. "I put a children's wading pool in for them, and after they discovered how to use the ramp to get into it, they went wild," said Mr. Burleson. "There was one that would paddle so fast that he stood on top of the water. Some liked to splash and duck their heads under, and some would dive completely under the water and swim three laps around the pool before coming to the surface."

The ducks proved to be an attraction that drew visitors who watched them for hours. The lawn chairs that were usually located on the front porch, were re-located to the back under the shade of the chestnut tree near the duck pen. "It was more fun than watching television," claims Mr. Burleson. "They really cut a shine." Other residents of the Burleson home, Smokey, the cat, and canine friends, Hawkie and Fu-Fu were also intrigued by the antics of the quick little quackers.

"Fu-Fu was mesmerized by the ducks," he recalled. "She wouldn't take her eyes off of them the whole time she was out there. And when I got up to leave, she would lunge at the side of the pen. The ducks were savvy to their bounds of security, and one of them would turn and hiss at Fu-Fu when she lunged."

Mr. Burleson watched the ducks grow and develop personalities. "I think she is the boss," he said pointing to one of the female ducks. "She determines who gets in the pool with her and when its time to settle in for a nap." He also gave them names - Hewey, Dewey, Lewey, Ooey, Gooey, "and one of them had to be Pewey," he quipped.

Mr. Burleson said he learned a lot about ducks and their ways during his summer-long ordeal. "They started getting tail feathers at about a month-old. When their wing feathers began to sprout, they were so heavy and awkward that their wings drug on the ground until they got to be long enough to cross over their backs. "It was quite a while before he could distinguish the drakes from the ducks. "The drakes developed a beautiful blue stripe on the wings."

The ducklings were hardly ever still. "They just moved all the time. And they were so quick," observed Mr. Burleson. "They could catch a fly in mid-air. They must have really sharp eyesight," he added. "They would lean their heads sideways and look at every airplane that flew over the house."

The ducklings peeped for several weeks. One of the questions

(Turn to Page B4)

Mr. Burleson and his son-in-law, Chuck, put red leg bands on the ducks for easy identification.

The ducks live with other wild and domestic waterfowl at the Westminster Community pond. Mr. Burleson uses binoculars to locate his ducks.

When the ducks were released at the "big creek," they stayed near the cage all day. "We thought we'd never see them again. We brought them back home that evening," said Mr. Burleson.

Ducky Adventure

asked by the many visitors to his home was, "When do they start to quack?" It was a wait and see situation, Mr. Burleson reported the first quack from the ducklings at five weeks of age. They were growing up. They were even trying to fly - flapping their newly sprouted wings with enough force to lift them straight up.

The time came when the ducks became less active and "acted like big ducks," said Mr. Burleson. "They needed to be out where they could swim in a larger body of water and try out their wings." It was time to set them free.

On August 8, exactly two months after the ducks hatched, Mr. Burleson and Chuck caught the ducks one by one, put a red leg band on each duck and loaded them into a cage on the truck. "We took them to the big creek at the back of the farm. We figured they would be able to swim away from foxes and find plenty to eat there," he explained.

Mr. Burleson admits, "It was a time that was both happy and sad. Kind of like letting the lions go in the movie, Born Free." The men opened the cage expecting the ducks to run out and take to the wing. Instead, Mr. Burleson recalls, "We had to coax them out. We watched them get accustomed to the area, and swim around, then we left, thinking we'd never see them again."

That evening, the two returned to the creek to fetch the cage. To their surprise, the ducks were still in the same place, and had been joined by two wild ducks. At the sound of the pickup truck, the wild ducks quickly swam downstream. "We gathered our ducks back in the cage and took them back home. I was afraid they didn't know enough to run from a fox."

The following day, after much deliberation, Mr. Burleson and Chuck gathered their flock once again. The ducks waddled around the yard for a short time, and at an opportune time Fu-Fu killed Pewey. That's when the farmers decided to take them to the community pond in Westminster.

The Westminster Community pond is ten miles away from the Burleson farm and is home to waterfowl all year round. On the day that he released his ducks, Mr. Burleson reported seeing a large flock of Canadian geese passing through. "I think our ducks were anti-social," he said. "They had a fight first thing."

On subsequent visits, Mr. Burleson said he has seen the five ducks scattered around the pond. "I think they are adjusting, now." He uses binoculars to look for the red leg bands on his ducks. "They are fed well by all of the people who visit the pond, and there are lots of fish for them to eat.

Raising the ducks was "a very interesting experience. I learned so much that I never would have known," said Mr. Burleson. "I might try raising geese next year," he added.

And how are Hewey, Dewey, Lewey, Ooey, and Gooey? Though Pewey came to an untimely demise, Mr. Burleson quips. "Everything's just ducky."

Robert Burleson said that his ducklings soon graduated to a kiddle pool. "They could swim three laps underneath the water."

THE MICRO WAY

LANI BLOOMER

Adding that final touch to your food is easy when you use a microwave. For instance, nuts, sesame seeds or coconut can be toasted in less time than it takes to preheat your range oven. They add a gourmet touch and a delicious crunch to vegetables, salads or fruit.

Here's a collecuon of quick garnishes to add flavor and variety to your meats. Try making croutons, they're easy to make. Or try one of the crumb toppings on your favorite casserole. The Browned Butter Crumbs are delicious on cauliflower too.

Crunchy Croutons

4-5 slices stale or firm bread
¼ cup vegetable oil
½ teaspoon onion powder
½ teaspoon garlic powder
1 teaspoon minced parsley
1 teaspoon paprika
2 tablespoons parmesan cheese, optional

1. Cut bread into ½ " cubes, you should have about 4 cups. Spread cubes out in a flat microwave pan. Drizzle oil over top, stirring to coat cubes. Sprinkle remaining ingredients on top, stirring again.

2. Leave uncovered, and microwave until bread is toasted and crispy, stirring every 2 minutes; High power for 6-8 minutes. If your oven heats unevenly, watch the bread carefully after 6 minutes so it doesn't scorch in spots.

3. Cool, then store in an airtight container. Makes 3 cups.

TIPS: If the bread is very fresh, it will take longer to toast. -- Add 1 teaspoon of your favorite herbs too, oregano for an Italian flavor, etc.

Browned Butter Crumbs

½ cup cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons margarine or butter

Combine crumbs and margarine in a 2 cup measure. Stirring every minute, microwave until crumbs are browned: high power for 3-4 minutes.

Bacon Crumbs

2 slices bacon, diced
½ cup dry bread or cracker crumbs
¼ teaspoon garlic powder

Mince bacon and mix all ingredients together in a two cup measure. Stirring every minute, microwave until bacon is browned and crisp: High power for 3-4 minutes. Mixture will get crispier as it cools.

Toasted Sesame Seeds: Spread 2 tablespoons sesame seeds on a small plate and microwave until toasted, stirring every minute: High power for 3-4 minutes.

Toasted Nuts: Spread ½ cup nuts in a pie plate. Stirring every 2 minutes, microwave until toasted: High power for 6-8 minutes. Nuts chopped in small pieces take less time.

Toasted Coconut: Spread ½ cup coconut in a pie plate. Stirring every minute, microwave until browned: High power for 2-4 minutes.

Blanching Almonds: Put almonds in a small bowl. Add hot water to cover. Microwave until water boils: High for 2-6 minutes, depending on quantity. Let stand 5 minutes. Pour off hot water, spread nuts on towel or paper towel until cool enough to handle. Rub nuts to remove skins, or squeeze gently at one end to "pop" almond out of skin.

Chopped Egg Garnish: Break egg into a custard cup, poke yolk twice with a toothpick or knife tip. Cover tightly with plastic wrap. Microwave until firm: Medium power (50,5) for 1-1½ minutes per egg. Let stand a minute or two, then chop. Medium power gets the white evenly cooked without causing rubbery spots.

Plump Raisins, Dried Fruit: Put desired quantity dried fruit or raisins in a measuring cup or bowl. Add hot water just to cover. Microwave until water boils: High power for 2-6 minutes, depending on quantity. Let stand a few minutes.

Warming Foods To Room Temperature

Some foods have their best flavor when they are served at room temperature, rather than icy cold. Use your microwave to bring foods up to room temperature quickly, without letting them sit out.

-- Cheeses: unwrap and place on plate. Microwave on medium power (50,5) for 1 minute for 8 ounces. If your oven doesn't have medium, use the defrost power level. Microwave for about 1½ minutes, or until the chill is gone.

-- Vegetable salads: microwave on medium for about 1 minute per cup of salad. Stir once halfway through.

-- Ice cream or frozen desserts are easier to serve if you warm them a little: microwave on medium low (30,3, defrost) for 1½ minutes for ½ gallon or a 9" frozen pie. If your oven heats unevenly, rotate part way through to avoid a melted spot.

-- Warm egg whites for more volume when whipping: microwave on high for about 10 seconds per egg.

-- Warm citrus fruit before squeezing to get more juice: microwave on high for 20 seconds for a lemon; 30 seconds for an orange. Roll under your palm on the counter, then squeeze for juice.

NOTE: Microwave times are approximate since oven speeds vary so greatly. Start with the shorter times given in the recipes and add time if needed.

Topping Tomato Plants

Home gardeners growing tomatoes on stakes or trellises may be faced with the problem of unmanageable vine growth late in the season. Strong hybrids that have been pruned throughout the season will reach a height of 6 feet easily. However, advises Susan Goldsworthy, Delaware County Cooperative Extension Horticulturalist, tomato fruit grow in size from nutrition manufactured in the leaves. If the leaves are cut off, the food-producing factory is destroyed and the size and amount of fruit will be small.

Instead of trimming the foliage late in the season, you can carefully cut the twine or material used to hold the plant to the stake, lower the plant gently so the top of the plant is even or below the top of the stake, then retie the top of the plant in three or four places. The bottom foot or 18 inches of the stem will bend out, but this will not affect the crop since all the fruit has been picked from the lower part of the plant.

If you want tomatoes right up until a killing frost, it is important to estimate how much time remains to produce edible fruit. It takes 45 to 60 days to develop red-ripe tomatoes from the time the blossoms set. If you are willing to settle for mature green tomatoes before the first killing frost allow 35-45 days.

If you think topping your tomato plants is best, knowing when you can expect frost in your area is most important. Remember, it is important to allow new leaves to form in order to enjoy tomatoes late in the season.

Omelets are about as versatile as eggs themselves. And you don't have to be as daring as Columbus to discover intriguing filling. Try this recipe suggested by the American Egg Board located in Illinois. It's guaranteed to start some new, creative omelets in your weekly menus.

ORIENTAL OMELETS

1 tablespoon firmly packed brown sugar
2 tablespoons dry sherry or apple juice
1 tablespoon soy sauce
2 teaspoons instant chicken bouillon
½ teaspoon ground ginger
6 ounces broccoli
6 ounces cauliflower, broken into flowerets
1½ cups sliced carrots (about 2 medium)
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tablespoon water
1 teaspoon cornstarch
8 eggs
½ cup water
¼ cup butter, divided
Green onion curls, optional

In large omelet pan or skillet, stir together sugar, sherry, soy sauce, bouillon and ginger until blended. Set aside. Separate broccoli flowerets from stems. Break flowerets into small clusters and set aside. Cut stems into 1-inch pieces. (If stems are very thick, slice lengthwise before cutting into pieces.) Stir broccoli stems, cauliflowerets, carrots and garlic into ingredients in pan. Cover and cook over medium-high heat 3 minutes. Stir in reserved broccoli flowerets. Cover and cook until crisp-tender, about 2 minutes. Combine 1 tablespoon water and cornstarch. Stir into vegetable mixture. Cook and stir until mixture boils and thickens. Boil 1 minute. Keep warm while preparing omelets.

Using eggs, water and butter, prepare omelets as instructed on inside front cover. Fill each with about ¾ cup of the vegetable mixture. Garnish with green onion curls, if desired.

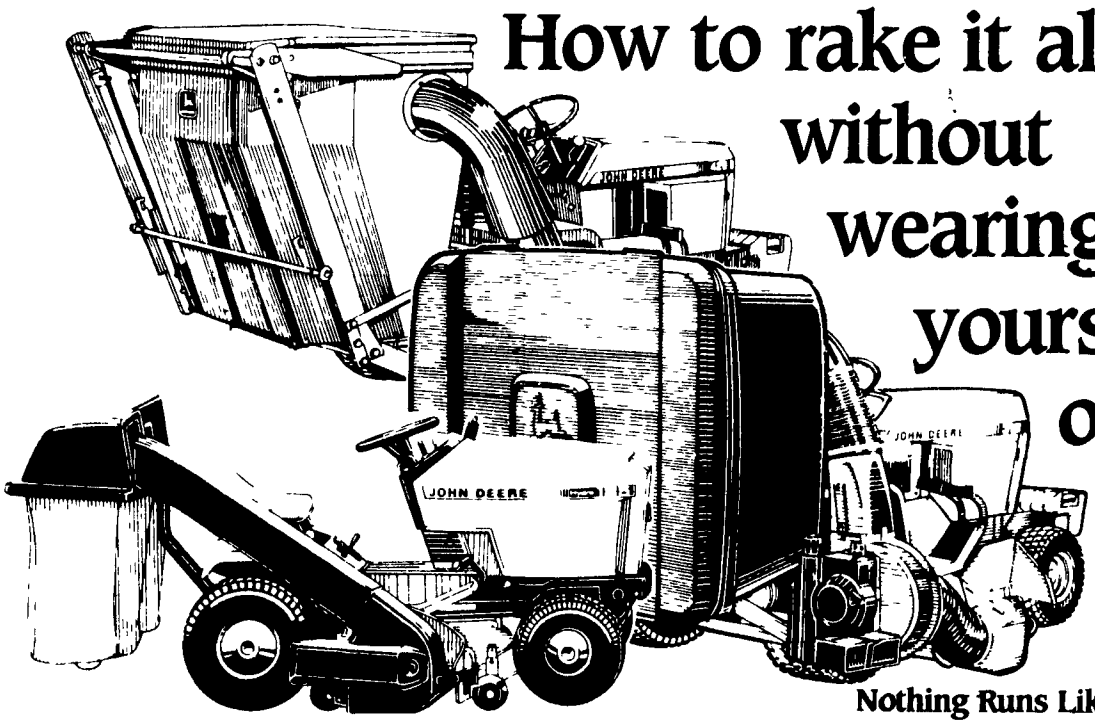
How to rake it all in, without wearing yourself out.



JOHN DEERE

Nothing Runs Like a Deere®

Grass clippings are bad enough, but the leaves? It's just getting to be too much? And there's no need to rake and bag the stuff by hand.

Now John Deere makes lawn cleanup easy. With a full line of material collection systems matched to John Deere riding mowers and tractors.

These systems come in a variety of combinations. Choose a twin-hamper 6½-bushel system for riding mowers, lawn tractors and 200 and 300 Series Lawn and Garden Tractors. Or the 6½-bushel Power Flow unit for tractors with 38-, 46- or 50- inch mowers. Or the new 3-bag Power Pak unit for 300 and 400 Series Tractors with 46-, 50- or 60-inch mowers. Big cleanup jobs demand big artillery. And John Deere's got it in pairs for 300 and 400 Series Tractors. The Tilt Dump and the Hydraulic Dump Systems, which are now engine-powered rather than PTO-driven.

When the 13-bushel hoppers are full, both models let you dispose of the material right from the driver's seat. No ropes to untie...no collection bags to unfasten or unzip.

Don't wear yourself out behind a rake. Get help from the number one name on lawns, John Deere. Come on in.

ANSWER - Mrs. Paul Beyer, East Greenville, cannot find clear-jell in local grocery stores. She asked if there is a substitute or another brand name for it. Thanks Joanne E. Fritz, Ickesburg, who suggests purchasing it at a bulk food store operated by the Amish or Mennonite since many grocery stores do not carry it. ANSWER - Lydia Stoltzfus, Paradise, wanted to know if it is possible to make jellies without sugar for diabetics. Thanks Joann Niebauer, Irvona, who said "Slim Set" is available in some supermarkets. Use sugar substitutes with it. Also you can use Low Methoxyl Pectin (LMP) and diCalcium Phosphate. It can be ordered from Walnut Acres, Deptment OG, Penn Creek, PA 17862.

Also thanks to Sara Jane Krall, Lebanon, who said jellies and jams can be made with Mrs. Wages Light Home-Jell Pectin. She said few stores carry it but it can be purchased by mail:
Mrs. Wages - Dacus, Inc., P.O. Box 2067, Tupelo, MS 38803-2067. Enclose $1.50/box. Sara Jane included several diabetic recipes which we will use in a special issue. However, below is her recipe for a sugarless jam.

Fresh Peach Spread

2 cups prepared fresh peaches
1 teaspoon lemon juice
¾ cups cold water
1½ teaspoon granulated gelatin
Artifical sweetener to substitute for 3 tablespoons of sugar
⅛ teaspoons pure orange extract.

Select fresh, ripe peaches about 1 pound. Pare and pit peaches. Cut peaches in small bite-sized pieces. Measure 2 cups. Place in heavy saucepan with lemon juice and add ½ cup cold water. Bring to a boil, simmer gently for about 8 minutes; stirring frequently. Meanwhile soak gelatin in ¼ cup cold water. Remove cooked peaches from heat. Add gelatin, artifical sweetnere and orange extract. Mix well to blend flavors and dissolve gelatin. Turn into 2 or 3 small hot jars; cover lightly and allow to cool. Cover tightly and store in refrigerator. Use as spread on bread, toast, muffins or crackers. 7 calo-

PA 4-H Program Receives National Grant

PENNSYLVANIA — Pennsylvania is one of six states to receive a grant to implement innovative 4-H commodity marketing programs, according to B. Alan Snider, director of the 4-H program in Pennsylvania. The grants were offered this year for the first time from the National 4-H Council Education Fund. The idea for the grants came from the Commodity Marketing Symposium, sponsored by the Chicago Board of Trade, held each spring in Chicago.

The commodity marketing program teaches 4-H members about the free marketing system, by exchanging major commodities and concepts underlying the free enterprise system. The main objective of the grant program is to show young people that commodity marketing may be studied as part of a particular 4-H project area or may be related to any project in concrete and practical ways. The funds will be used to help young people see the connection between their 4-H project work and the role of their project in the functioning of our economy.

Pennsylvania's $500 grant will be used to expand a public auction approach to marketing pigs and lambs as an extension of the 4-H swine and sheep breeding projects. A Youth to Youth Pig and Lamb Sale will be expanded to teach members, leaders, parents and other producers required production, marketing and purchasing skills. Increased involvement in the commodity marketing program will enable 4-H'ers to apply economic marketing and management principles and tools to their other 4-H projects.

Pennsylvania will use the grant to facilitate creative approaches for learning commodity marketing skills, expand participation and involvement, provide opportunities for sharing skills developed and knowledge gained and to explore career opportunities related to commodity marketing. In Pennsylvania, 4-H is administered through Penn State's College of Agriculture. Other states receiving the grants are: Idaho, Indiana, Nevada, South Carolina and Virginia.

Curious Goats Keep Children Busy

FLEETWOOD, (BERKS CO.) — Jonathan Kurtz likes helping his dad on their 100 acre Fleetwood farm. There's always lots of interesting things to do on the farm.

The Kurtz's bought three Nubian goats with floppy ears. The mama goat is named Maggie and she has two twin kids named Timothy and Jenny.

The goats live in a pen, but Johnathan and his sister Tammy like to let them out into the yard so that they can play with them.

The black goats with their floppy ears like people. As soon as the mother goat hears the house door slam, she peers over the stone barnyard wall and baa's for attention. Her kids are a bit more shy and sometimes hide behind their mother.

The goats like to eat flowers, bushes and everything else they can chew. One day, Jonathan's daddy was loading high moisture corn from his silo into his truck so he could deliver it to another farmer. Maggie ran up and sniffed the strong sweet smell of the corn that clung to his clothing. She liked the odor. Maggie licked his hands, then his boots, and then she started chewing his jeans.

"Whoa! Stop!" Jonathan's dad yelled. He did not like having his pants eaten.

Jonathan's mother doesn't like when the goats gobble up her pretty flowers. Although Jonathan and Tammy try to discourage the goats from eating things they shouldn't, the goats are naughty kids and do not listen.

Sometimes they stand straight up on their hind legs and chew the leaves off the trees. Since Maggie is quite tall, she can stretch to reach branches that are high above her.

Jonathan and Tammy plan to teach their goats to pull a cart so they can have fun going for a ride. But for now, the children haul their goats around on a trailer connected to a three-wheeler. The goats like to ride around the farm.

Jonathan and Tammy think goats are the best pets to have. If you ever have a chance, they believe you should get a goat too.

Jonathan likes to train the goats to do tricks. Here Jenny stands on her hind legs as she tries to reach the leaves Jonathan holds in his hand.

As Jonathan and Tammy Kurtz concentrate on teaching Jenny a trick, the other goats devour the flower beds.

Oops! Tammy has a hard time hanging on when Maggie takes her for a ride.

How To Select Patterns

How do you know whether a pattern is too complicated for your sewing skills? Consider your own limits, your ability to interpret directions, the time you are willing to give to your sewing, how much you enjoy figuring out complicated to unusual details and how clearly the pattern company has interpreted the design.

According to Maryetta Dorricott, Delaware County Extension Home Economist, some high fashion designers use some complicated construction methods. They may even invent some clever ways to accomplish the result they want. If you are using a pattern which carries the designer's name, you can expect to run into some such situation.

You need to be flexible and realize there are many ways to get the same results. You may need to forget some of your past teaching and use plain common sense on some of the construction problems. Focus on the effect the designer was trying to achieve and then you'll find it easier to figure out the instructions. If a pattern is labeled "designer fashion" without the name of a designer, it usually means that the pattern company has simplified the construction process somewhat and that an experienced seamstress will have few problems. This varies with the complexity of the design, however. Before you pay for a pattern, look at the envelope. There are usually line drawings which show up construction lines better than a photograph. Study these lines and read all the descriptive information. Some patterns also show the outline of all pieces of the pattern. These, too, will give a clue to some of the problems you may encounter. Remember that the fewer pattern pieces, the fewer problems you are likely to have.

Most patterns give directions for interfacings, underlining or lining when suitable. For some high fashion designs, this can be tricky. It's difficult to get enough experience for all sewing problems one meets. But if you're accustomed to reading directions and have had a variety of sewing experiences, you should be able to figure out most of the instructions. Sometimes you can make your own simplified methods if you keep in mind the effect you want.

The fabric you select for the style will be a major factor in your success. The pattern envelope suggests suitable fabrics and if the design is photographed, you can get an idea of the effectiveness of certain fabrics.

If you're not very confident of your own sewing skill, look for patterns marked "easy to make," or "simple to sew," or "make it tonight." If you have trouble with these, you might want to enroll for a refresher course in new sewing techniques. Call the Extension Office at 565-9070 if you are interested in a sewing course.

Flower Arranging Made Easy

BY LOU ANN GOOD

LANCASTER — Brilliant splashes of flowers punctuate the countryside during this season. Too often, an admirer who hopes to carry some of their beauty inside will cut a fistful of blooms, plop them into a vase filled with cold water and watch them wilt.

Why do bought flower arrangements last longer and how do florists design eye-catching bouquets?

Kelly Landis, an FFA graduate who concentrated on horticulture, believes that with a few guidelines and some practice, home gardeners can transform their flowers into artfully arranged centerpieces that match those florists produce.

In a step by step approach, Kelly, who lives on a farm near Lititz, shares some of her flower arranging secrets with "Lancaster Farming" readers.

GATHER FLORAL EQUIPMENT

To start, she suggests buying oasis and florist tape at floral supply departments. The oasis should be cut into a block shape which extends ½ inch above the container. Secure it with florist tapes crisscrossed on top of the container.

Soak the oasis and fill container with water before arranging. If you wish, add a floral preservative to the water. These solutions contain water soluble compounds such as sugar and a mild bacteriacide. Without the preservative, bacteria will multuply in the water, clogging stem ends and causing flowers to wilt.

Kelly prefers to use a wire cutters rather than scissors to cut both greens and flowers.

CHOOSING THE RIGHT CONTAINER

Containers can add or subtract from the arrangement. For a country look, use baskets or wicker. For a modern look, try ceramic or light weight plastic that looks like ceramic.

Kelly said, "The container determines the height of the arrangement. Always have the tallest flower peak 1½ to 2 times above the heigth of the container."

GREENING THE ARRANGEMENT

Kelly establishes the heigth and width by greening an arrangement. This is done by choosing complimentary greens from shrubbery or flowers and placing them parallel to the container in north, south, west and east positions. Greens should have sturdy stems. Strip off foliage that will be below the water line because submerged leaves will decay rapidly. The longest stem should be placed in a vertical position and then in spoke-like fashion fill in spaces with greens.

To see if the stems are proportioned properly, Kelly places the arrangement on the floor and looks down on it. The greens should have a balanced effect. Foliage if used too much will result in a forest effect. To prevent holes, Kelly warned that flowers and greens should not be pulled out of the oasis.

CHOOSING THE FLOWERS

When choosing flowers, Kelly suggests checking the bloom to make certain it is firm on top. If soft, it has passed maturity and won't last. Look for 2-3 varied sizes and a few buds.

Some flowers have a longer cut life than others. Many of the fall flowers such as mums, daises, and marigolds last a long time. But to make the most out of their lifespan, cut flowers early in the day or in the cool of the evening. Bring a container of water to the garden and cut stems with a sharp knife, making a slanted cut. When flowers are cut, the sap automatically places a seal over the cut edge. This hinders the flower from drinking water. For this reason, always place them in a bucket of warm water—never cold water. Wooden stems should be crushed with a hammer or sliced to open a water passage.

FLOWER PLACEMENT

Next, stick a flower above each greens placement. Choose small flowers for center top. Fill in with medium size flowers at second spot for greens. Never overcrowd an arrangement or have two flowers the same length side by side. Keep the larger flowers lower in the arrangement and the smaller ones at the top or throughout to give a light touch.

Each flower needs space around it. Use an uneven number of leaves and flowers.

As a rule, Kelly suggests that no more than three colors should be used in an arrangement. Exceptions are victorian designs which mix all colors and shades. But these are best left to a seasoned flower arranger.

Kelly suggests, "Use the nicest flowers as the focal point of the design." The focal point is generally near the middle of the bottom.

FINISHING TOUCHES

Kelly said, "For a filler, I love Baby's Breath. I use it in everything. It's a wonderful filler." She finds it versatile for using in fresh, silk and dried flower arrangements.

If the flowers do not cover the oasis, moss can be used to cover it or fill in the gaps with greenery.

Ribbons, bows, birds and artificial mushrooms can add to the overall design. But use them sparingly and put them at stragetic points rather than placing them haphazardly throughout the arrangement.

Don't place your arrangement where it will be unduly exposed to heat and light, such as on a hot windowsill or near a heat-producing appliance.

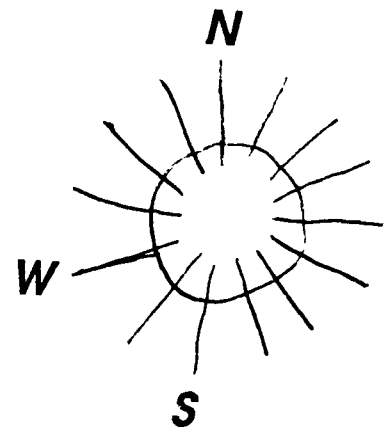
Kelly had an interest in flowers and designing ever since she can remember. During high school, she worked in a craft shop where she observed a florist teach classes. There she learned to pick and dye weeds and grasses and bleach them by garbage cans full.

She encourages others to experiment with silk and dried flowers. For ideas, Kelly suggests looking at arrangements you admire and then immitating them. "It's so simple," she said. "If you follow my directions and experiment, you can duplicate professional arrangements."

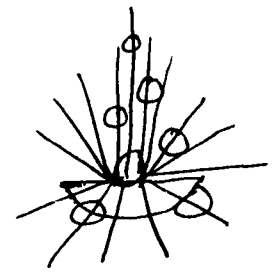
Kelly Landis wins numerous ribbons at local farmshows for her flower arrangements.

Kelly prefers to work in an area with a plain background so she can judge more easily the proper heighth & width of each stem.

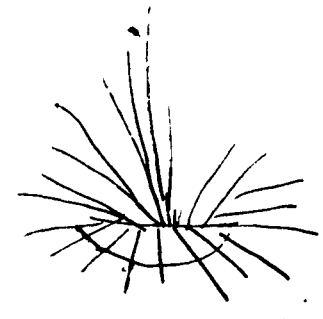
For easy flower arranging, place all materials needed on large work area covered with newspaper.



Begin the all-round arrangement by placing foliage stems horizontally to the container. All the outline stems must be exactly the same length from the edge and placed the same distance apart.



Stagger the blooms in the arrangement. Never have two flowers the same height side by side.



Determine the height by placing a stem in the middle. No other stems or flowers should be as tall as the middle one. Fill in the outline with foliage before placing flowers in the arrangement.

In this all-round arrangement, a bow is used for the highest point. Kelly believes this is one of the easiest arrangements for beginners to design.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

What we needed were barn cats.

What we got were 13 (what's in a number, anyway?) furry, four-legged, juveniles addicted to cat-food, fresh warm milk, and positioning themselves directly underfoot.

Just as her six kittens had reached the playful stage at which she could have begun teaching them proper cat habits - like a taste for mice -, our lone mother barn cat disappeared in early summer. It was just the latest in a series of unusual, cat-astrophies which had led to a near-shortage of farm felines. Such a shortage is unprecedented in recent farm history.

Naturally, the half-dozen toddler kittens were rescued from orphanhood and installed in one of the calf condo pens in the nursery area. And, because they had lost their mother long before she had raised them to food-catching stage, they couldn't simply be left to fend for filling their own hungry little tummies. Of course not.

In the meantime, the house cat had delivered her own litter of seven. Initially installed in a big box in the basement, they soon outgrew that haven and figured out how to claw their way up the stairs to the living room. After tripping for about the fifth time over what was fast becoming a living-room litter, all eight - mother and children - received a promotion to the wood shed.

This was acceptable for about a week or two, until kitten curiosity and courage sent them on expeditions which inevitably ended on one of the porches. Before too many more weeks had passed, the entire batch had claimed squatter rights to the basement porch, where our frequent barn comings and goings offered them adequate attention.

Besides, every time you opened a door, they were all tumbling after your feet and their mama was whining for a handout. But, I'm a pushover for soft, cuddy, shining-eyed kittens that climb into my arms, snuggle up, and start to purr in obvious contentment.

But what we really need are barn cats.

After all, with cool weather impending, 'tis the season for the influx of farmstead rodents inside hunting snug winter quarters. But without a mother to instruct them, how would the batch of calf barn kittens figure out what they were supposed to do with those rat-tailed beasts. Someone will have to teach them.

Right. And, you know who. Or, is that whom? No one here cared, so long as the kittens got the idea.

Enter a tiny mouse, discovered as I swept the feed alley in the heifer pens. Herding a two-inch mouse infant into a two-square-foot box would be a piece of cake. Theoretically, the kittens would figure it tasted that good, too.

After the mini-rodent escaped my clutches twice and disappeared into the stone foundation, I philosophized that if the Almighty had intended me to snag mice, I'd at least have fingernails of credible length. Besides, the kittens had taken one sniff of a rat killed in one of the buildings, turned up dainty noses and got that pleading "feed us!" look on their furry little faces.

Out went another offering of catfood.

About this same time, the eldest decided that it was time to begin the transformation of porch cats to barn cats. Their timid mother, terrified of even the sounds of bawling cattle, freaked out, so to speak. Squalling, calling and pacing the yard, she eventually begged a couple of the kittens back through the yard to the porch.

The rest took various cover. And mother cat whined for a reunion.

By morning, porch kittens were all back at the usual spot - curled together in a plant flat - waiting for breakfast. The barn kittens tumbled underfoot as I fed calves until they, too, got chow.

The bag of catfood is rapidly diminishing. We're clipping catfood coupons like crazy. Our 13 kittens have butterball bellies, while the mice are laughing all the way to the feed bin.

You know, what we really need are some barn cats.

Franklin County Royalty Tours Dairy Farm

BY BONNIE BRECHBILL
Franklin Co. Correspondent

ST. THOMAS — Few dairy farmers ever have the chance to host royalty, but the Meyers Brothers Dairy of St. Thomas had that privilege August 26. Franklin County Dairy Princess Stephanie Meyers, daughter of host farmer J. Robert Meyers Jr., escorted Franklin County Fair Queen Leslie Finnegan around the farm on a rainy afternoon.

The Queen and the Princess had met at the Franklin County Fair the previous week while handing out trophies and ribbons at the dairy show. Leslie, 18, who lives in a suburban area of Chambersburg, expressed interest in the dairy industry, and Stephanie invited her to come to see her father's and uncle's farm.

The royal tour began in the milk house, where Stephanie, 18, explained the pipeline set-up, then dipped a sample of raw milk from the bulk tank for her visitor to taste.

"We drink our milk just like this," Stephanie said. "It's raw, not pasteurized. I think it's better this way."

Leslie agreed. "It's creamier," she said. "It's good."

They moved to the computer terminal which controls the cows' feed intake, where Stephanie explained that the cows' neck chains register them with the feeder. She compared the presence of a computer in the milk house with "any other business that gets computerized."

After showing Leslie the nitrogen tank, Stephanie talked a bit about cow genetics as related to the dairy shows Leslie had seen at the fair.

"Some farmers breed for milk, some for the type of cow the judge is looking for," she explained. "It depends on the farmer's priority."

The first of the farm's 250 Holsteins were just coming into the parlor as Stephanie and Leslie left the milk house.

"Do you mind the smell?" Stephanie inquired of her guest before entering the parlor. When assured that Leslie did not mind, they went into the parlor to watch the cows come in. The first cow into the double six was one of Stephanie's winning animals that Leslie had "met" at the fair.

"Do they mind traveling to the fairs and shows?" she asked.

"It's pretty stressful for them," Stephanie answered. She then explained the traffic flow through the parlor, adding that it takes about five or ten minutes to milk a cow. She demonstrated the application of the pre-milking dip, then let Leslie apply it to the next cow.

"My mom wouldn't believe this," Leslie commented as she reached under the cow.

After Stephanie showed her the milker assemblies and the suction power, the Queen inquired, "Do they mind being milked?" "The first time you milk them, they

Eating Right 4-H Day Camp

The theme for 4-H summer day camps across Columbia County this year was "Eating Right is Basic to Good Health". Kids ages 8-12 had the chance to learn good eating habits and had fun doing it at the same time. The kids also cooked, tasted new foods and experienced what the 4-H youth program in Columbia County is all about. On the first day the campers helped make a 5-foot hoagie consisting of various fruits, vegetables, meat and cheese. Good nutrition games and a fruit or veggie craft also highlighted the program.

Day camps were held in: Berwick, Millville, Bloomsburg, Catawissa, Benton.

Over 100 kids from across Columbia County had a chance to experience the 4-H day camps and became 4-H members.

Funding was provided through a special grant from Penn State University's Expanded Food and Nutrition Educational Program. Educational information was based on materials from Michigan State University's "Eating Right is Basic-2."

The program was sponsored by the Columbia County Cooperative Extension Service. Pamela J. Brown, Extension Home Economist and Martha Sheehe, nutritionist, coordinated the camps and provided training to three summer youth employment workers from JPTA program in Columbia County. Also assisting with the camps were Nutrition Advisors, Lois Kocher, Jolene Stackhouse and Kathy Thomas, Columbia County Cooperative Extension Family Living Assistant.

Campers enjoyed making a 5-foot hoagie almost as much as eating it.

Fun and games taught campers good nutrition and eating habits.

kick," Stephanie replied, "but it becomes routine for them."

The royalty donned black rubber boots and went out into the loafing and feeding area. "Now this smells out here," Leslie commented. Stephanie showed her a handful of silage and explained its composition. The fermentation, she noted, is what Leslie smelled. Stephanie pointed out the computerized feeders, adding that the cows "eat four times a day to help them give the maximum amount of milk. They can only get the feed at certain times, though."

"They must get accustomed to what time of day it is," Leslie said. Stephanie agreed, adding, "Cows really have it made in comparison to people."

The next stop on the tour was the calf raising area on the hill behind the barn. Leslie admired the healthy-looking calves

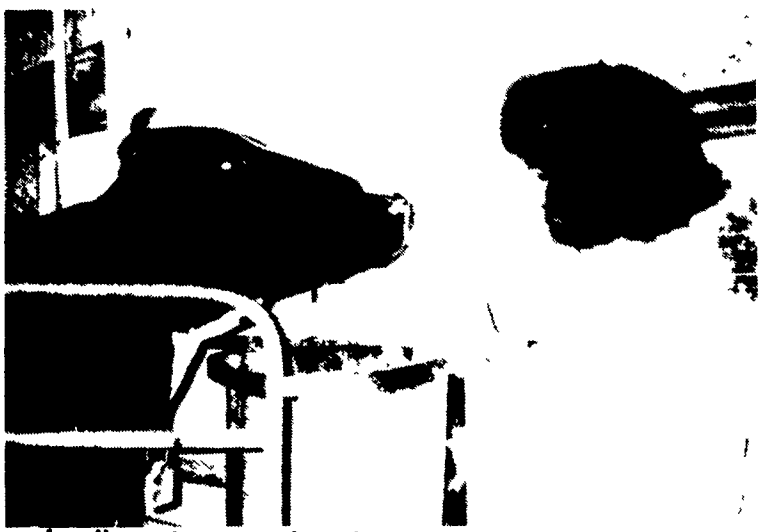
Both hutches and condominium, and held the bottle while one of the calves drank. "It doesn't take long to put one of these things down, does it?" she remarked as the calf slurped it greedily. "Do you leave them up here in the winter time?"

"Yes," Stephanie replied, "they just stay inside the hutches more, and we give them plenty of straw."

Back in the milking parlor, Stephanie instructed Leslie in the proper way to apply a milker to the cow's udder. "We learn people by their faces; I learn cows by their udders because this is my normal view of them," the Princess observed while prepping a cow.

At the conclusion of the tour, Leslie commented, "It's interesting to know what all goes on."Many of Leslie's duties in promoting the Franklin County Fair as Fair Queen involve agriculture.

Both Fair Queen and Dairy Princess will be leaving Franklin County this week to further their educations. Leslie, who sings and plays the flute, will enroll in West Chester University as a Music Education major. Stephanie will attend Virginia Tech with a major in Dairy Science.



Leslie gets acquainted with the cow she watched Stephanie show at the Franklin County Fair.

Sew What's New?

BY LOU ANN GOOD

NEW OXFORD (ADAMS CO.) — Sally Miller finds meaning in teaching others basic sewing skills.

This married mother of two children has always been fascinated with clothing construction and needle arts. After receiving a Home Economics degree from Penn State, Sally has used her skills by working in the Adams County Extension Office, in a fabric store and in serving as a 4-H leader.

Recently she continued her training by completing thirty hours of Extension work to become a Clothing and Textile Master Volunteer. Under this program, Sally and thirty-one other women received an up-to-date, in-depth, hands-on training, and information in the field of clothing and textiles.

Now, they are paying back their training by volunteering forty hours of their time to teach others what they have learned.

To pay back her time, Sally has planned and implemented a workshop titled "Sew What's New." Her teaching session informs participants of new notions and tools available to the home sewer. Sally has taught it at both her county and regional 4-H Fashion Revue.

Currently she is planning to hold another workshop called "Designer Sweatshirts." In this class, participants will learn how to applique unique custom-made sweatshirts.

Sally's sewing expertise is not limited to her volunteer work. She teaches for pay at a local retail fabric store and at her local high school's adult education program.

Since the extension offices are limited in the time and money they have to reach the population with their expertise, Sally sees the Penn State University Cooperative Extension Service as a means of disseminating information from the university to people who need it.

She believes both the volunteer teacher and the class participant benefits. "Some people pass off volunteer time as not meaningful," she said, "but it gives time-management and organization skills. And it helps in leadership and personal skills."

This New Oxford resident stresses, "So many neat things are going on in home sewing. I'd like to develop a network to keep up-to-date."

From her perspective Sally insists, "People need basic home living skills. The schools emphasize basic subjects, but too many students aren't learning how to sew on a button or hem clothing."

She feels not only is sewing an outlet for creativity but also offers consumer skills. "When customers know how to compare a purchased item with something they can sew, then they have a choice. Are they willing to settle for the quality and fit of a factory-made item or do they want a custom-made look?"

In her classes, Sally teaches students how to get a custom-made look and get rid of the home-made look.

"Sewing," Sally admits, "is not truely economical when you can buy a garment at a chain department store. "But," she adds, "I have a clothing appetite that cannot be satisfied with their flimsy garments. To get the quality, uniqueness, and fit, I have to sew it myself."

There is a nominal registration fee for the classes taught through this extension service. These funds help support persons who attend next year's cooperative classes.

Sally doesn't forsee her paying jobs replacing her volunteerism. "I'm a firm believer in the 4-H extension program," she said. "I hope to have the opportunity to teach during next year's cooperative classes.

Another facet that Sally appreciates about volunteering is the opportunity to set up meetings compatible with her own schedule.

In exchange for thirty hours of training, the Clothing and Textile Master Volunteers may select a variety of activities.

Sally said, "Some start 4-H clubs or an alteration business. But," she added, "since I was already a local 4-H leader my time did not count as payback." Payback must be something over and beyond what the trained leader has already been doing.

For information on how you can get involved as a Clothing and Textile Master Volunteer, contact your county extension service.

Extension Home Economist Eleanor Garvis, left, discusses plans with Clothing & Textile Master Volunteers Sally Miller, New Oxford & Jean Reever, East Berlin.

Sewing Tips For Pile Knits

Before you start to sew any knit pile fabric, check your sewing machine adjustments. Use a size 11 ball point needle (size 14 for heavier-weight fabric) and ball-point pins, suggests Maryetta Dorricott, Delaware County Cooperative Extension Home Economist. A new needle is a must to prevent snags caused by a blunt or jagged tip.

Use cotton-covered polyester thread. If you can't get an exact color match, use a shade deeper rather than lighter. Try a stitch length of 10 stitches per inch (slightly longer than normal). Use a stretch stitch if your machine has one, or a straight stitch, stretching the fabric slightly as you sew.

If fabric doesn't feed smoothly, lessen the pressure on the presser foot. You may need to loosen the stitch tension to keep seams from puckering.

Pin seams together carefully to prevent fabric layer from slipping when you sew. Hand baste seams with heavier-weight fabric. A special foot attachment can help, as can tissue paper strips placed on fabric surface as you sew. Sew with the nap whenever possible.

Interface lapels, collars, cuffs, waistbands and facings to help your garment hold its shape. Reinforce shoulder and waistline seams by stitching ¼ inch wide twill tape or seam tape into seam. Since most knits will not ravel, special seam finishes are usually not necessary. Simply press seam allowances open for a neat finish. If your pile knit does ravel or "shed," try this: machine zigzag along raw edges or stitch ¼ inch from raw edges and overcast edges by hand. If you have an overlock machine, serge the seams.

To reduce bulk at seams:

(1) Grade seam allowances around facings or a waistband. Leave the seam allowance closest to the garment widest, grading down to ¼ inch.

(2) You can reduce bulk where necessary by "shaving" away the pile with clippers. Be careful not to cut the garment itself.

(3) To reduce bulk at waistbands and cuffs, try the "stitch-in-the-ditch" technique. Instead of pressing the long un-notched edge under along seam line, leave it flat and overcast the raw edge On the right side of garment, stitch in the "ditch" just below the waistband or cuff seam, catching the overcast edge.

Before hemming your garment, let it hang for 24 hours to "stretch" into place. A hem depth of 1½ inches to 2 inches works well. Finish hem edge as you did seams, or machine-stitch stretch lace seam binding to edge; hem by hand.

Who is it that said, "Never look back, someone may be gaining on you?" Well, I've looked back, and believe me no one in the Northeast is gaining on Pennsylvania dairy farmers.

In fact, an examination of milk production data for the 25-year period 1960 through 1985 shows Pennsylvania dairy farmers closing the gap between them and New York dairy farmers, and widening it between them and dairy farmers in all the rest of the Northeastern states. This week's Business Seminar will focus on the whys and wherefores of this remarkable trend.

The Northeast Versus The United States

The Northeast (New England, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland) is generally a milk deficit producing region. Surpluses and deficits are defined to be the difference between production and consumption, where consumption per person is assumed to be the same everywhere as it is in the United States taken as a whole.

In 1960 the Northeast produced only 74 percent of what it was then assumed to be consuming or had, in other words, a deficit of 26 percent. By 1985 this deficit had fallen to only 13 percent, thanks almost exclusively to production increases in Pennsylvania, New York and Vermont of 3.1, 1.6, and 0.5 billion pounds, respectively, during that 25-year period.

In 1985, approximately 600 pounds of milk were produced per person in the United States. About 245 pounds were consumed in fluid form and about 351 pounds were consumed in manufactured products of all kinds. The balance, four pounds, can be explained by differences in imports and exports, changes in carryover stocks of storable products, and other factors.

Although the Northeast produces less milk in total than it consumes in all products and forms, it clearly produces more than enough milk to meet its fluid needs. Not much milk in fluid form is shipped into or out of the Northeast. Manufactured products move freely into and out of the region, however, with a net inflow to make up the deficit in certain products and areas that would otherwise exist.

Pennsylvania Versus The Northeast

Milk production in the Northeast increased about 17 percent during the period 1960-85. Pennsylvania accounted for more of this increase than any other Northeastern state, as it generated a 45 percent rise in its own production. Maryland, plus 6 percent; New York, plus 15 percent; and Vermont, plus 28 percent, were the only other Northestern states to register gains in production during the 25-year period.

In 1960, Pennsylvania had a deficit in production of about 11 percent. By 1985 a surplus of about 40 percent had developed. Only two other states, New York and Vermont produced more milk than is assumed to be consumed within their own borders. New York is currently running about a 10 percent surplus, and Vermont produces about 6.5 times more milk than is consumed by its own people. Maine is almost balanced in milk production and consumption, but its dairy farmers are producing less milk per Maine citizen now than they did in 1960.

New York produced 11.7 billion pounds of milk in 1985, continuing its longterm lead in total milk production in the Northeast. In 1960 Pennsylvania produced only 68 percent as much milk as New York, but by 1985 this had increased to 85 percent as the result of a production level of 10.0 billion pounds. Vermont has been third among the northeastern states throughout the period 1960-85. It is a distant third, however, as production there in 1985 was only 2.4 billion pounds.

Production Within Pennsylvania

The Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service reports milk production data for three sub-state regions in Pennsylvania. These are referred to as the Pittsburgh milkshed (composed of the 19 western-most counties), the New York milkshed (composed of 20 north-central and north-eastern counties), and the Philadelphia milkshed (composed of the remaining 28 south-central and south-eastern counties).

All three milksheds had increases in milk production during the 1960-85 period, but the increases were rather small in both the Pittsburgh and the New York milkshed areas (5 and 12 percent, respectively). Production was up by 94 percent in the Philadelphia milkshed, however, and that area now accounts for 62 percent of all the milk produced in the state (up from 48 percent in 1960).

Lancaster County led the state in milk production in 1985 at 1.6 billion pounds (16 percent of total state production). It also lead in 1960, but accounted for only 7 percent of total production then. Franklin County was second in 1985 at 0.6 billion pounds and Bradford County was third at a little under 0.6 billion pounds. In 1960 Bradford County was second while Franklin was in fifth place. Susquehanna County, which had been in third place in 1960 moved to seventh place in 1985.

Why The Growth And What Of The Future?

What has happened to milk production in Pennsylvania since 1960 has been easy enough to document, but why it has happened is much less clear. Even more uncertain is what is likely to happen in the future. Although I don't feel terribly confident of my own insight or foresight in either of these two matters, I'll take a shot at them anyway. It would be fun to learn of your reactions to my ideas here, so let me hear from you — whether you agree or disagree.

First, why the increase in milk production in Pennsylvania — particularly in the Philadelphia milkshed? Ultimately, it would seem, it should all come down to the relative attractiveness of alternatives. More specifically, the attractiveness of alternative uses for the dairy farm owner's capital resources, land, buildings, machinery and equipment, cattle, operating funds, and for the dairy farm operator's and his family's management and labor — time, in other words.

There are two components or aspects to my notion of "attractiveness." The most important one, up to some point, is the monetary and the second, up to that same point, is the psychic. Beyond that point, psychic is first and monetary is second, but the "point" itself is different for different people and probably changes over time for any given person.

It is generally conceded that dairying is the superior monetary agricultural alternative in the Pittsburgh and New York milksheds, yet production there has been fairly flat for a long time.

It is also generally conceded that off-farm employment opportunities are weaker in those two milksheds then they are in the Philadelphia milkshed.

Furthermore, alternative on-farm enterprises seem more numerous and more competitive with dairying in the Philadelphia milkshed than they are in the Pittsburgh and New York milksheds.

Yet, the major real growth in milk production has taken place in Southeastern Pennsylvania, so we must look for reasons other than the attractiveness of alternative on-farm enterprises and at off-farm employment opportunities for an explanation.

Here is where our respective opinions are most likely to differ. Let me get right to what I think these other reasons are, however, because I am fast running out of assigned space.

The first I'll mention is market stability and orderliness. Two major entities are heavily responsible for this — Federal Order 4 and a large regional milk producer's cooperative whose name probably should not be mentioned in this seminar.

My second suggested reason for the explosive growth in milk production in Southeastern Pennsyl-

Jacques®
SEED COMPANY

Bigger Yields.

No, we can't offer you a name as big as Pioneer's. But we can offer some better performing hybrids, like 7820 and 8350. Fact is, three years of our on-farm, side-by-side comparisons show Jacques' 7820 seed corn outyields Pioneer· brand 3352 seed corn by an average of 9.7 bushels/acre and Jacques 8350 outyields Pioneer· brand 3184 by an average of 7.9 bushels/acre. These averages reflect all trials, not just selected data.

And you won't have to sacrifice confidence. Jacques unique hybrids are backed by decades of extensive research and repeated field tests against our toughest competitors.

In fact, research and follow-up competitive performance evaluations have always been top priorities at Jacques.

Jacques is also involved in one of the largest seed-related biotechnology programs in the world.

So you see, Jacques can give you the advantages of a much bigger seed company ... only we won't charge extra for a big name.

vania is the superior crop producing capacity of that area due to climate, soils, and topography. Harvested feeds can generally be produced more cheaply there than in other parts of Pennsylvania or in most other parts of the Northeast as well.

Thirdly, a strong infra-structure is in place to support the production of milk. Here I am thinking of general farm supplies and services, as well as suppliers and services specialized to dairying — milking equipment, veterinarians, nutrition consultants, etc.

A fourth reason I'll suggest is the strong tradition of dairying that exists in the Southeastern region. Of no small importance to this tradition are the Amish and Mennonite religious sects who have formed a significant and almost permanent core upon which markets and an infra-structure can confidently build.

Finally, proximity to the huge Philadelphia-Baltimore-Washington market has always been an advantage, but it became even more so when transportation costs began their rapid escalation in 1973.

Well, finally, what of the future?

Economists are good at projections because in effect we seldom say much more than: "If things don't change very much they are likely to remain about the same." In keeping with that stereotypical bent, then, I would make only the following observation relating to the future: Pennsylvania dairy farmers had the same opportunity to participate in the Milk Production Termination Program as dairy farmers in all other parts of the country. Yet they chose, in droves, not to do so.

Other than Nevada (not known as a "biggie" in the dairy industry) Pennsylvania had the lowest rate of participation (less than 3 percent) in the Buyout among the 48 contiguous states. This suggests to me that there must be an underlying strength to the dairy industry of our state that will assure its viability for a long time to come.

Mennonites Schedule Faith And Farming IV

"The Renewed Farm" will be the focus of the Faith & Farming IV Conference at Laurelville Mennonite Church Center, Mt. Pleasant, PA, December 6-8, 1987. The farm conference will hear addresses from Christian environmentalist Calvin DeWitt and look at three case studies of issues faced by farm related people. "The earth is the Lord's and we are God's people" is the full title of the theme.

"We really want to take care of what God has given us," said Bill Helmuth, a calf farmer from Kidron, Ohio. "This is something we have to speak to as Christians," Helmuth and his wife, Corrine, will serve as moderators and were also a part of the conference planning.

"From the Yoders' experience we'll learn from difficulty as well," he said. "We'll draw out how support from the church has been beneficial and how it has not been helpful. The church needs to know how to respond appropriately." Helmuth is referring to another Ohio family which will be one of the case study presenters. A livestock dealer suffered some severe financial reverses and has since had a church support group to give support and guidance. Two other case studies will be on the global connections of farming (the agricultural manufacturers, Steiner brothers of Orrville, OH) and the role of governments (Lawrence Burkholder, a farmer minister from Markham, Ont.).

Respondents to the three case studies will include Ohio State University agriculture professor, Mark Headings of Wooster, OH; Ontario minister, Mary Schiedel; and Cleveland minister, Vern Miller.

The conference will also hear a report from the Mennonite Central committee Task Force on farming, a committee formed to aid farmers in the present crisis.

Calvin DeWitt is professor of environmental studies at the University of Wisconsin and director of the AuSable Institute in Michigan. A member of the Christian Reformed Church, DeWitt has spent much of his life combining his faith and ecological concerns.

The Laurelville conference grew out of the dark crisis of North American agriculture and has served as a support group for Mennonite farmers and farm related people. This year's conference was planned by Levi Miller and Arnold Cressman of the Laurelville staff and a group from the Holmes-Wayne County area of Ohio· Veryl and Miriam Kratzer, Art and Jocele Meyer, Willis Neunschwander, William Stauffer, and Bill and Corrine Helmuth.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Ordinarily we do not patronize any fast food places — in fact my first hamburger at a McDonalds was in London, England. However, on our trip to Alaska we tried many different eating places. One evening our group went to a salmon bake near our hotel where we had salmon, halibut and ribs made over an outdoor pit.

Fairbanks started as a trading post and became a mining town that produced 200 million in gold. We saw the Alaskan Pipeline which carries oil to Valdez in its 48 inch pipe while crossing 800 rivers and streams. It cost 8 billion dollars to build and the oil is 180 degrees when it comes from the ground.

We took a ride on a new sternwheeler to a replica of an Indian Village. The large boat held 1000 people and only needed 3 feet 3 inches of water to navigate. It was interesting to learn that Captain Jim Binkley's grandfather came from Lancaster County. We saw fish-wheels that move perpetually and scoop salmon from the river. In the village we saw fish drying and being smoked, tanning of furs, Indian beadwork and dogsled pulling. These sled dogs prefer to sleep outside in the very coldest of weather.

We visited the flower and vegetable gardens at the University of Alaska the same day and also spent time in their museum. Fairbanks, a city of 60,000, has large department stores and also log houses.

The next day we started a long bus ride to Tok over bumpy roads built on perma frost. They require constant repair. We stopped to shop at North Pole, Alaska and also to mail cards to the grandchildren. I happened to spy a big moose standing in a clearing but no one else saw any on the trip. The University of Alaska has a barley project on 80,000 acres. Here the soil must be worked for 3 years and left unplanted to "warm up" after the small trees are removed. It was here at the half-way point of the trip that I caught a bad cold. I wasn't the only one that had a cold but that didn't make me feel any better.

The next day we had breakfast at 5:30 and left on the bus for the long ride to Whitehorse in the Yukon territory. The 8000 foot mountains that border the highway for 80 miles or so are covered with white spruce and aspen in Kluane National Park. It has been 86 degrees below zero here with 81 feet of snow in the mountains. We stopped at a ghost town of fallen in log houses and stables. That evening we saw a Frantic Follies show but I was too tired to enjoy it.

Proper Use For Your Freezer

Many "freezer myths" still abound today regarding the proper use and care of freezers. When used correctly, your freezer can bring you convenience while it helps provide your family with fresh food all year round. I want to offer several suggestions on the proper use and care of freezers:

Plan your freezer loads with your freezer size in mind. Placing too many packages of unfrozen food in the freezer at one time can slow down the rate of freezing and poor quality may result.

For best results, the maximum amount of food to be frozen at one time equals three pounds per cubic foot. After placing items in the freezer, try to wait until it is frozen solid (about 24 hours) before placing more unfrozen food in the freezer.

Cook in larger quantities than you need and then freeze the excess for later use.

Use your frozen foods. A steady turnover of food into and out of the freezer makes the best of food, electricity and space.

Organize freezer contents by type of item and label each package with contents and date. This helps you find foods quickly and reduces the time that the door needs to be kept open.

Use air-tight packaging and wraps designed specifically for freezing. Food quality and flavor can be lost through improper wrapping.

Freezing food does not have to be a time-consuming process. Meats can be securely and quickly wrapped in heavy-duty aluminum foil. Many fruits can be washed, drained, sprinkled with sugar and packaged in freezer bags or cartons. Fresh vegetables must be blanched and packaged in one of the many freezer containers available today. Freezing, in fact, is a quick and simple preservation process for many foods. But remember, frozen food will be no better than the quality of the food when fresh. Only by using high quality foods, and proper freezer use and care techniques while preparing your food for the freezer, will you be assured of top quality flavor results.

How To Freeze Baked Goods And Pastries

Freezing does not improve baked goods and pastries, but it will keep them fresh and delicious if you follow the following suggestions. To avoid sogginess, cool baked goods and pastries to room temperature before packaging. Freeze only fresh pastries and bread. Never wait until they are stale or dried out.

Plastic bags designed for freezer use are ideal for storing homemade pastries. Pastries from the supermarket or bakery can be frozen by simply overwrapping and properly sealing the package. Unused pastry portions may also by packaged in freezer bags for use at a later time.

Frozen products maintain quality longer in the absence of air. So remove as much air as possible and seal properly before placing baked goods in the freezer.

Pies may be frozen either baked or unbaked. To serve a baked pie such as a fruit pie warm, you can heat and thaw it at the same time. Completely remove the wrapping and place it in a 400 degree F. oven for 30 to 40 minutes. If you have a microwave, you can defrost and heat the pie in a fraction of the time required in a conventional oven. Allow approximately 4 minutes per pound on your defrost cycle.

Unbaked pies should NOT be thawed before baking. Remove wrapping, make vents in top crust, if you did not do so before freezing, and place in a preheated 400 degree oven. Bake until the pie is brown. This will take about 15 minutes longer than if the pie was baked unfrozen. To be certain the pie is finished, check to see if the filling is bubbling in the center of the pie.

If you plan to freeze frosted cakes, use butter, cream cheese, fudge or penuche-type frostings for best results when thawed. Freeze frosted cakes before wrapping and remove wrapping before you thaw them.

Cookies may be frozen either baked or unbaked. To freeze baked cookies, bake as usual, cool quickly and freeze before packaging. Allow them to thaw 5 to 10 minutes before eating.

To freeze unbaked cookies, prepare dough as usual, and form into a long roll. Wrap and seal. Defrost dough only long enough to allow slicing. Bake as usual.

Vegetables are good – take one to lunch.

Some Biotech Products Available Now

Much of the discussion about biotechnology today deals with topics like genetic engineering, animals growth hormones, pest resistant crops, and other areas of experimental research. Higher yielding crop varieties, improved livestock production and more effective pest control are just a few of the benefits biotechnology will deliver in time.

In many respects though, time is the one element of biotech which remains uncertain. While scientists are confident of the promise and potential offered by recent laboratory discoveries, they acknowledge that in most cases, several more years of research are needed to develop products that farmers can use on a commercial scale.

Biological Pest Control

For farmers today, however, several products of biotechnology are already available for crop production. Biological or microbial insecticides, for example, are rapidly becoming standard products in pest management programs for many major crops including fruits, vegetables, tobacco, cotton, corn and other grain crops.

"Biotechnology isn't just a science for the future," explains Dave Martin, director of sales and marketing for Abbott Laboratories. "While it's true that many recently announced breakthroughs in biotech research won't be available to the marketplace for several years, many farmers are already using biological pesticides."

Martin adds that the most widely used class of biological insecticides contains the microorganism Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt).

Abbott Labs produces Bt for several formulations and concentrations of Dipel*, a biological insecticide used to control pests on over 200 food, fiber and forestry crops in more than 40 countries.

Corn Market

In recent years, biological insecticides have earned a solid reputation with corn growers and other crop producers as effective and safe alternatives to synthetic chemicals. Dipel, in particular, has become widely accepted in Nebraska and neighboring states for control of corn borer.

"In states where corn borer is a major pest, there's been a tremendous increase in grower awareness of biological insect control over the last two or three years," Martin says. "Due to the effectiveness and safety of biologicals, many growers now prefer these products over chemicals."

Biological pesticides in general tend to be very narrow in their range of activity, so they normally pose no hazard to man, animals, fish, birds and non-target or beneficial insects. In addition, they are not a threat to groundwater contamination, an issue of increasing concern in irrigated areas and where leaching or runoff may cause problems.

"The feedback we're receiving from growers and their families shows that human and environmental safety is becoming increasingly important," Martin adds. "Growers today want effective pesticides, but they also want the safest products available."

Dr. Bob Cibulsky, manager of field research and development for Abbott, adds that in addition to controlling certain pests, biological often fit well into pest management systems because they do not threaten important beneficial insects.

"In Nebraska, Kansas and other states where mites are an economic pest of corn and sorghum, beneficial or predatory insects often act as natural control agents to keep mite populations in check," Cibulsky explains. "Mite flareups, however, are common following treatment with synthetic chemicals. That's due an imbalance in the pest/predator complex with occurs when predators are killed by pesticides. By contrast, biological insecticides have no effect on predators. For growers, preserving predator populations often means a new savings in chemical and application costs."

Other advantages with Bt-based biologicals are that it is virtually impossible for target pests to develop resistance in the field, another common problems with synthetic pesticides.

Bt controls insects belonging to the lepidoptera order, which includes many leaf-eating caterpillars ranked as major crop pests. Unlike chemicals, which may kill by ingestion, contact or through respiration, Bt is toxic only when eaten by the insect.

"Once in the insect's stomach, a toxic protein crystal produced by the Bt bacterium reacts with the gut pH of the target pest," Cibulsky explains. "The digestive tract is quickly paralyzed and the insect immediately stops feeding. Death follows within one or two days."

Some Biotech Products

New Biologicals

While the primary market for Bt in the corn belt thus far has been corn borer control, new biological products are also on the verge of being introduced for control of other key pests of cotton, corn and other crops.

DiBeta*, for example, is a biologically derived miticide/insecticide developed by Abbott for use in cotton, potatoes, apples, grapes and other crops. EPA registration for the product in cotton, potatoes and ornamental crops is pending.

DiBeta, like Dipel, is derived from Bt. However, there are significant differences between the two products. While Dipel product formulations contain actual Bt microorganisms, the active ingredient in DiBeta is a metabolite of Bt which is effective against a broad spectrum of mites, as well as certain insects.

In california and Arizona cotton, DiBeta is expected to play an important role because it controls both mites and lygus bug, two of the most important pests. Other characteristics of the product are a high degree of selectivity and ease on beneficials, factors which are especially important to growers who use a system or integrated approach for pest management.

The new miticide/insecticide is also being welcomed in potato markets, both for its ability to control Colorado potato beetle and because genetic resistance of insects has not been a problem due to the unique mode of activity of biologicals and biological derivatives. In cotton too, biologically-based insecticies are being increasingly viewed as valuable alternatives to chemicals, particularly since signs of heliothis resistance to pyrethroids have recently been observed.

In the Midwest, where corn rootworm and cutworms are major pests, other types of biological insecticides are also on the horizon.

"The important thing is, growers are becoming more aware that effective biological pesticides are already here and playing important roles in the production of major crops. Biotechnology isn't just a dream of tomorrow. It's here today."

SLICK CONCRETE CAN BE ROUGHENED

SCABBLING is an effective way to avoid unnecessary losses of cattle. The SCABBLER makes bands about two inches wide approximately 1/8" to 3/16 in. depth. This gives sufficient area for good footing while allowing you to scrape the smooth surface as before. It is near enough to the surface to give your cows full advantage of the roughness and deep enough to remain effective for years. It greatly aids in heat detection.

And the good news is that it is reasonably priced. You have the choice of doing it yourself or having us do it for you. We offer service right to your door. Call us for more details.

6200 SERIES:

The talk of the country!

David Benter
Mayville, Wisconsin
"Fuel efficiency is great. My 6250 started every morning this past winter and because of the Deutz air-cooled engine, we never had to worry about antifreeze leaks."

Ray Sowers
Toledo, Illinois
"I wanted a tractor with the horsepower to do some field-work and the maneuver-ability for loader work in a small feedlot. I tried a Deutz-Allis 6275 with loader for six weeks on a trial basis this winter. Then in spring I bought it."

Tom Wilzbacher
Champaign, Illinois
"I can't afford downtime. That's why I want a tractor in the 60 to 65 hp range that's dependable and easy to use... We used the 6260s for the first time last year and not a thing went wrong."

Lentz Wolf
Monroe, Wisconsin
"We look for the smallest tractor that can do the job... our new 6260 meets our needs for hauling manure, planting corn, moving hay and pulling silage wagons. The transmission is easy to shift and has good gear ratios. And I have learned what a good, efficient engine it has."

Farmers across North America are buying Deutz-Allis 6200 Series tractors...and they're talking them up! Five models from 43 to 71 PTO horsepower feature the Deutz air-cooled diesel engine, the tightest turning radius in their class and a fully synchronized transmission for easy, smooth shifting. And you can double output with a PTO and 3-point hitch at both ends. See your Deutz-Allis dealer and see what everyone's talking about.

Solanco Fair Announces Opening

The Community Fair Directors announce the opening of the 38th Southern Lancaster County Community Fair on Wednesday, September 16, 1987. The Fair continues through Friday, Sept. 18 at the fairgrounds in Quarryville, PA. The fairgrounds are located along Route 472 on the southern fringe of Quarryville.

Activities begin at 3 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 15th at which time exhibits will be accepted for competition. Exhibits may be entered Tuesday, Sept. 15 from 3 to 10 p.m. and Wednesday, Sept. 16 from 7:30 to 9 a.m. If you have grown, raised, or made something since last year's fair bring that product to the fair and exhibit it. We encourage you to participate as an exhibitor in the fair. Judging of most exhibits will begin at 10 a.m. Wednesday, Sept. 16 and should conclude by midafternoon. You can enter exhibits in the following departments: Dairy Cattle; Beef Cattle; Sheep; Swine; Rabbits; Forage & Grain; Vegetables; Fruits & Nuts; Home & Dairy Products which includes Baked Products and Canned or Dried Products; Floral; Needlecraft including Clothing and Needlework; and Art, Photography, Crafts.

The Food Committee prepares full course meals and individual food items each day in the Hoffman Building for you convenience and dining pleasure. Chicken Pot Pie dinners are featured all day Wednesday. Thursday's luncheon special is Beef Stew followed by a Ham Supper from 4-8 p.m. Friday's special is Hot Roast Beef Sandwich. Also, a large variety of delicious quality food items are available at our numerous food stands located throughout the fairground.

Highlights of Wednesday's activities include judging dairy cattle color breeds 10 a.m.; judging sheep 2:00 p.m.; the Street Parade 6:30 p.m.; and the tug-of-war competition 8:30 p.m. Thursday will feature judging Holstein dairy cattle 10 a.m.; judging swine 3 p.m.; judging beef 6:30 p.m.; the Baby Parade 7 p.m.; and the farmer relays at 8 p.m. in which teams of three will compete in three events — stacking straw, pushing a wheelbarrow, and eating ice cream. There will be two divisions — 14 & under and 15-19 years old Friday's main events are the Tractor Driving Contest 10 a.m.; the Market Hog & Steer Sale 6:00 p.m.; special entertainment featuring DAMASCUS, a contemporary Christian music band, at 8:30 p.m. in the Show Barn; and the Rural Youth Awards during special entertainment intermission at approximately 9 p.m. The Petting Zoo of farm animals sponsored by the Solanco FFA is open each day.

The Fair encourages the production and marketing of high quality agricultural and home products and the improvement of rural living conditions. It should be the desire of every community resident to produce quality products during the year and to exhibit them at the Fair. Our Fair serves the producer and community well as a media whereby our agricultural productivity, personal talents, and cultural wealth are displayed and recognized. Commercial exhibits display the latest technological developments and advancements.

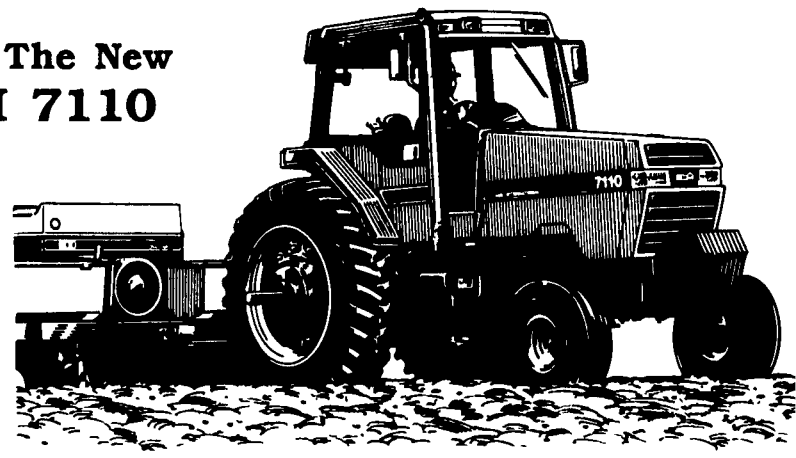
Introducing The New MAGNUM 7110

And The First All New Tractor From Case IH



Case IH put more into the new MAGNUM tractor line than any farm tractors developed in over twenty years. Here's why you'll get more out of it.

MAGNUM means more. Outstanding field performance from a new 505 cubic inch turbo-charged engine with reserve power. MAGNUM power.

The MAGNUM tractor's powershift plus 18-speeds of shift-on-the-go workpower at your fingertips — standard. And only MAGNUM tractors offer a full powershift creeper transmission with six additional speeds from .5 to 2.1 mph...for more control and performance. MAGNUM performance.

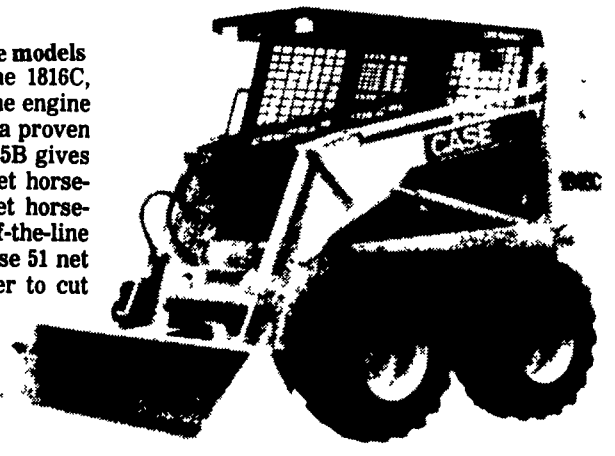
The MAGNUM tractor's new larger cab has 48 square feet of window area... virtually unobstructed visibility... more seating comfort. MAGNUM comfort.

It all adds up: The Case IH MAGNUM 7110 tractor sets new standards for the 130 hp (97 kW) class...and for you. See us for details.

MAGNUM means more.

CASE... THE "CAN DO" MACHINE

"I can do the work of 10 men with anyone of my five 1845 Case Uniloaders," says one happy customer. "You really can't believe it 'til you put one to work!"



The line of Case skid steers inlcude three models to meet your workload requirements. The 1816C, with a 16 net horsepower (11.9 kW) gasoline engine and a width of only 35 inches (889 mm) is a proven performer for tight-quarter work. The 1835B gives you a choice of a Case water-cooled 32 net horsepower (23.9 kW) gasoline engine or 34 net horsepower (25.4 kW) diesel engine. The top-of-the-line 1845C Uni-Loader skid steer features a Case 51 net horsepower (38 kW) diesel with the power to cut big jobs down to size.

Maneuverability, dependability and serviceability all add up to better performance and a better bottom line. For more facts and convenient one-stop service see your Case IH dealer.

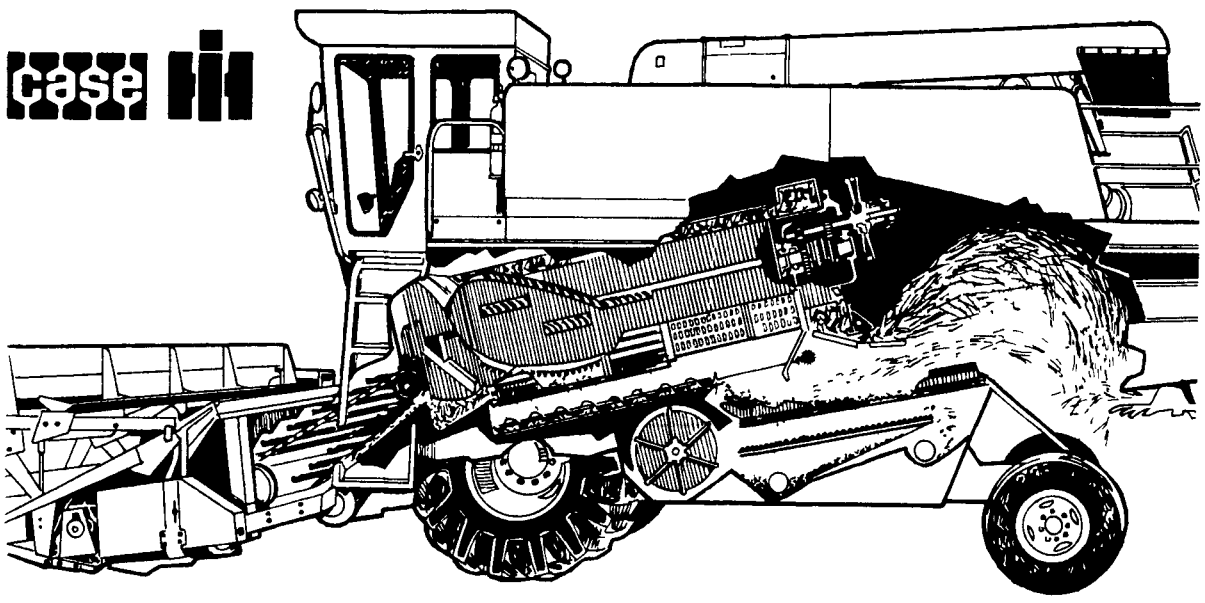
The Secrets To Case International Axial-Flow Combine Success In The East...

FEWER MOVING PARTS...

HIGHER QUALITY GRAIN...

ALL CROP VERSATILITY...

case IH



The one moving part in Axial-Flow's entire threshing/separating process is the single large-diameter rotor. Nothing more. No cylinder, beaters or straw walkers. There's far less that can break or need maintenance. That's Axial-Flow combine simplicity.

Axial-Flow helps bring top price at the elevator. It handles grain more gently. Less crackage and dockage. You'll combine higher moisture grain at faster ground speeds for a quicker harvest. That's Axial-Flow performance.

Axial-Flow Combines for every crop. Designed to harvest over 100 different crops including corn, soybeans, wheat, sorghum and others. All popular grain header sizes plus 4 to 8-row corn heads.

HOOBER COMBINE SERVICE...

HOOBER COMBINE SERVICE SPECIALISTS KNOW COMBINES.

For ten years Hoober's 4 combine mechanics have been working with Axial-Flow technologies. A COMBINE BOUGHT FROM HOOBER IS BACKED BY PEOPLE WHO KNOW AND CARE.

Durability and high capacity

The Model 1900 self propelled forage harvester is built for high capacity chopping The hungry 181 square inch throat opening swallows a lot of material fast And a 270 hp diesel engine powers the massive, 24 inch diameter cutterhead That s chopping power Besides being powerful, the 1900 is rugged Many of the parts used on the 1900' are the same as those used on our largest chopper—the Model 2100 So extra durability and longer life are built in Stop in and let us show you the other features that make the Model 1900 a Whopper Chopper

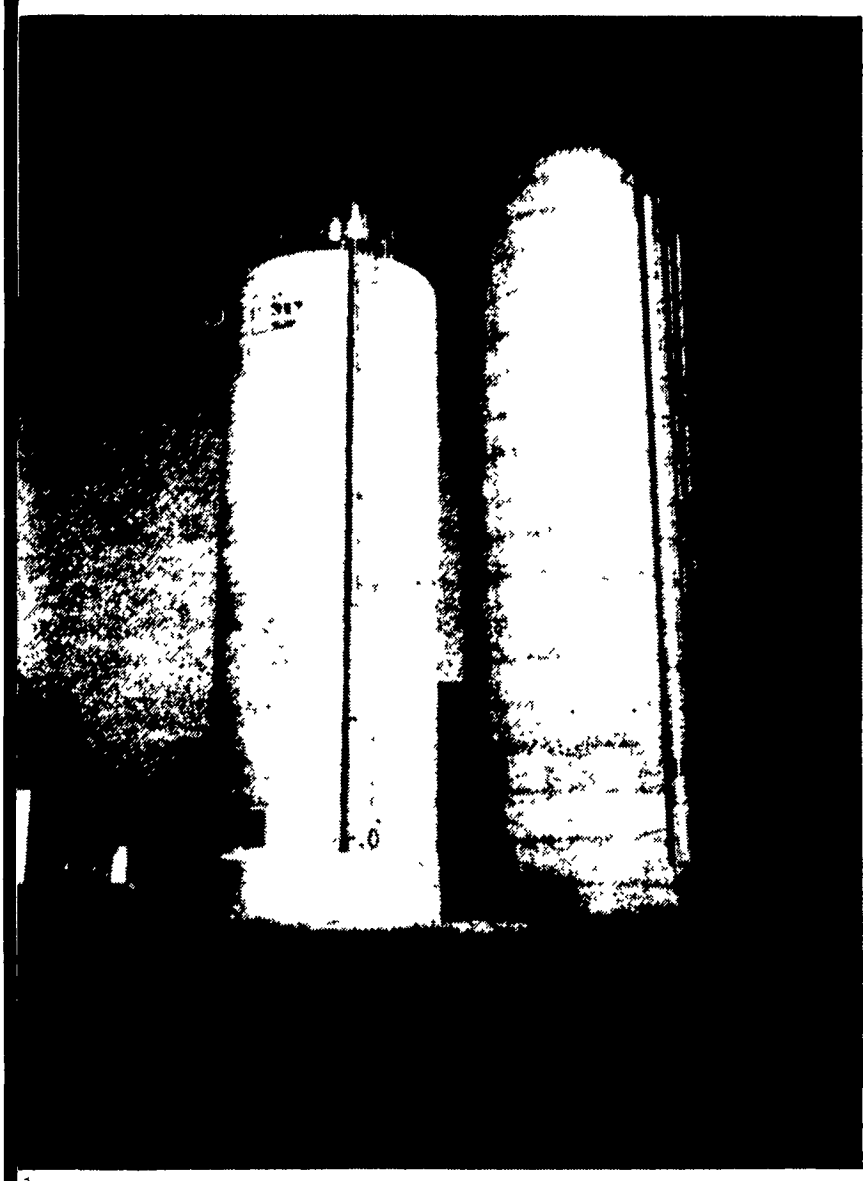
Solid Ways To Improve Your Farm

Consider The Many Advantages Of Concrete



You still have time to get your Sollenberger Silo for high moisture corn storage this fall. The summer of 1987 will be remembered for the many hot, dry days. These high temperatures damaged a lot of stored corn in structures that have a thin wall and do not reflect heat. Avoid this heat damage with a poured concrete silo from Sollenberger Silos Corp.

* The Laidig 43 bottom unloader handles high moisture ear corn and shelled corn.

* The Laidig 98 or 198 will do a good job with grains or forage at 55-60% moisture. SAVE YOUR VALUABLE LEAVES.

You Will Appreciate The Quality Of A Sollenberger Silo For Many Years To Come.

PRE-CAST BUNKER SILOS

"THE ECONOMICAL CHOICE" STORAGE FOR ANY FORAGE

Also Suitable For Grain Storage, And Practically Any Other Bulk Material.

The Sollenberger Pre-Cast Bunker Silo Panel Is Designed To Be Free-Standing. With The Tongue and Groove Edges, It Can Be Coated With Mastic & Bolted Together To Give An Air-Tight Smooth Wall That's Easy To Pack And "Keeps Feed Good." Delivered And Set On Your Prepared Gravel Base.

- Outside Walls
- Center Walls
- Can Be Moved, Or Added To Later
- 8'6" high
- 5'2" Wide
- 5000 P S I Steel Reinforced Concrete
- Adaptable To Headgates Or Self-Feeders
- Very Strong
- Can Be Used For Retaining Walls
- Many Industrial Bulk Storage Uses

We have contracts already for the 1988 season. This is an indication that it too will be an extremely busy year. Consider your needs, and then give us a call if we can be of help. By ordering early, you can save on the price and also help us schedule our work better.

INDUSTRIAL SILOS

- Lower construction cost
- Standard 6" steel-reinforced, poured concrete walls
- Smooth, leak proof walls
- Maintenance free
- Concrete wall reduces product freezing in winter and heating in summer
- Lower fire insurance costs

Committee To Advise PDA On Swine Health Announced

HARRISBURG — A committee to advise the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture on swine health policies was announced today by Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff.

Wolff said the committee will increase input on health matters from swine producers, farm organizations and animal health experts. This will help the department to monitor the progress of its current programs and draft new policy where needed, he said.

The panel's first task will be to review the department's pseudorabies program, Wolff said. Pseudorabies, a persistent problem in swine-producing regions of the nation, also affects other animals but it is not considered contagious to humans.

Wolff noted that pseudorabies represents "a nagging problem for the department."

"We recognize that the current program for dealing with the disease has not been 100 percent popular with the affected producers and some sectors of agriculture. The cornerstone of my policy is to reach out for the expertise and opinions of others, and the committee was formed for that purpose," the Secretary said.

Currently, pseudorabies is confined chiefly to Lancaster County, location of all but two of the 46 infected swine herds now under quarantine. However, the state has experienced three major outbreaks since 1980. In all, 235 herds have been infected, although that number reflects several herds that were reinfected one or more times, according to Dr. Max Van Buskirk, director of PDA's Bureau of Animal Industry.

With each outbreak, which sprerad to as many as 12 counties in the area, the disease was brought under control by state and federal agriculture personnel, but total eradication in Lancaster County was never achieved.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is currently completing studies involving Pennsylvania and pork-producing states in the Midwest to assess ways of dealing with the disease.

Pennsylvania's current policy is to quarantine infected herds, Van Buskirk said. The department is also funding a two-year $148,000 research program at the University of Pennsylvania to examine various aspects of the disease.

Wolff said the committee members were selected from a list of nominees submitted by organizations and by the University of Pennsylvania and The Pennsylvania State University. Each group was invited to make two nominations, from which at least one person was selected by the department.

At its organizational meeting in Harrisburg on Aug. 21, the committee elected John Henkel of Strasburg, a nominee of the Lancaster-Chester County Pork Producers Association, as chairman.

Other committee members and the organizations that nominated them are:

Kent Strock of Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania Farmers Association; Byron Martz of Dalmatia, Pennsylvania Farmers Union; Christian Seaman, Pennsylvania State Grange; Lawrence Arnold of Womelsdorf, Pennsylvania Cooperative Swine Breeders Association; Ray Lehr of Lancaster, Pennsylvania Feed Dealers Association; Eric Zeiset of Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania Livestock Association's swine producers; Kevin Rohrer of Manheim, Pennsylvania Livestock Association's beef producers.

Also, Allen Burkholder of Ephrata, Lancaster-Chester County Pork Producers; Eugene Glick of Belleville, Pennsylvania Livestock Auction Association; Douglas Clemens of Hatfield, Pennsylvania Meat Packers; Mark Nestleroth of Manheim and Ken Kephart of University Park, Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council; Dr. L.J. Hutchinson of University Park, Penn State University; Dr. Dan Cohen of Kennett Square, University of Pennsylvania; and Dr. Robert E. Graybill of Lancaster, Pennsylvania Veterinary Medical Association.

Berks Co. Cattlemen's Sale Set

LEESPORT — The Berks County Cattlemen's Association is sponsoring a Club Calf and Registered Heifer Calf Sale to be held here at the Leesport Market and Auction on Saturday, Nov. 21, 1987. The sale will begin at 6 p.m., and will be preceded by a free beef vegetable soup supper at 5 p.m. for all registered buyers and consignors.

According to county president Ken Rarick, the Association is currently accepting nominations from any producer who wishes to consign one to three calves to the sale. Deadline for entering heifers is Sept. 21, 1987, and the steer entry deadline is Nov. 1, 1987. Entry forms can be requested by contacting the Berks County Extension Office, telephone 215-378-1327.

"We plan to accept roughly twenty-five steers and ten heifers," said Rarick. "Entries will be accepted from Association members first, and from non-members on a first-come, first-served basis. On sale day, our sale committee will select the first five club calves to sell, and the remaining entries will be sold in a random order."

Rarick listed the sale rules:

1. Beef breeds and beef crossbreds will be accepted;
2. Steer and heifer calves will be accepted (steer calves will be sold as club calves; registered heifer calves will be sold as project calves);
3. Calves must be weaned and on creep feed at least two weeks prior to the sale;
4. Steer calves must be dehorned;
5. Calves must be completely healed from castration;
6. Calves must show no signs of illness, warts, ringworm or any deformity;
7. All club calves should be halter broken;
8. All calves must have shipping fever vaccination. Seller must submit a signed paper stating the compound used in this treatment. All heifers must have appropriate vaccination, etc. needed for interstate transportation.

Rarick added all club and heifer calves will be sold by the head. Sale expenses will be shared by all consignors on a percentage basis of five percent. An entry fee of $12 will be charged for consignors who are non-members of the Berks County Cattlemen's Association. This fee is per producer, not per consignment.

"The berks Cattlemen's Association will be putting together a group of quality calves for this sale," noted Rarick. "We welcome any beef producer to participate, whether they're from Berks County or the surrounding area. And, we encourage young people who are looking for project calves or cattle producers who are looking for good feeders or breeding stock to mark their calendars and join us for the sale."

For more information, contact any sale committee member: Paul Holcombe, 215-926-4388; Ken Rarick, 215-944-6007; Mike Firestine, 717-866-4185; Hugh Brown, 215-756-6583; Bill Weist, 215-926-6127; Clyde Myers, 215-378-1327; or Sheila Miller, 215-589-5617.

Swine Management Changes

Change. No single word causes more uneasy feelings, more apprehension or more fear. I don't quite know why, unless it's the uncertainty of the outcome of change.

Life is full of changes. As we grow from infancy through youth and adolescence to adulthood, middle and old age our bodies are constantly changing. We grow up, go to school, graduate, go to work, get married, buy a house, have children, retire and die in the course of our lives, but change one thing out of the ordinary and we become upset.

Agriculture is in a period of change--a change for the better, probably, but only time will tell. We've all been concerned about the low crop prices. Fortunately, in the hog business prices have been good. Inexpensive corn and high hog prices mean profits are up. How long they'll stay there is uncertain.

Survival in fluctuating markets depends on a producer's ability to change. It's imperative that, when markets are good, you save for times when markets are bad.

One of the nice things about fluctuating commodity prices is that when they're down you can always be sure a change will eventually occur and they will improve. Unfortunately, the reverse is also true.

A change for the better, a change for the worse. These are common sayings. I've always wondered how some people handle change so well, while others have problems coping with it.

Thinking back, I can't help noticing one major change that's occurred in the swine industry -- the shift toward confinement production. The trend is still under way today.

Pasture-kept hogs, you say! How antiquated! Yet pasture systems definitely have a place in the industry. And just because you don't see elaborate buildings, don't assume changes haven't taken place.

One nice thing about being a county agent is seeing the wide array of methods incorporated into agricultural production these days. After I completed school, I soon realized that what I'd read in textbooks didn't apply in all situations.

The key to success is the ability to change. I've changed my evaluation of some of the things I previously learned, and we all need to change ourselves to be the best at whatever it is we do.

Some changes are easy. If you became aware of a new product that improved hog growth rates by 50 percent and only cost 10 cents to administer, you would probably implement it in your program.

On the other hand, if a new total confinement system would cost you $100,000 for a 50 sow unit, and the interest payment alone would amount to $10,000 per year, would you build the unit? I hope you'd say "Whoa! Let's not make this change without some pencil pushing, cost analysis and deep thought."

You see, a pasture system might not be so antiquated after all. And the changes required to switch to confinement might not be justified in your situation. Think through any management changes carefully before you jump into them.

Some changes are forced upon us, while others can happen only with our blessing and encouragement. Unfortunately, we can't stop the hands of time and stay young forever, but a little pre-change thought can keep us in the hog business for a long time to come.

Don't resist changes that can improve the profitability of your operation. But push the pencil and double check your figures before adopting them. Be skeptical of new products you've never heard of before. Check them out first. Then if you're convinced, try them out on a small scale first and when you're sure the outcome is positive in your situation, try them on a larger scale.

Don't resist change. Instead, use it carefully to improve your swine operation in the ways most likely to guarantee your future in the industry.

Vasilas Joins Del Staff

NEWARK, Del. — Dr. Bruce L. Vasilas, an agronomist specializing in corn and soybean production, has joined the plant science faculty and research staff of the University of Delaware's College of Agricultural Sciences as an assistant professor, effective July 1.

Vasilas holds a doctorate in soil microbiology from the University of Minnesota. For his dissertation he evaluated techniques for measuring nitrogen fixation in soybeans. He earned both his bachelor's degree in soil science and a master's in soil biochemistry at the University of Maryland. While attending college there, he worked for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Beltsville research center.

For the past six years Vasilas has been a crop production specialist on the faculty of the University of Illinois. His primary research there involved nitrogen fixation in soybeans, and corn and soybean response to stress (drought, acid rain and hail damage).

As a member of the University of Delaware department of plant science, Vasilas will spend half of his time teaching and the other half conducting research for the Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station.

Lawrence-Haven Calf In Sampling Program

SHAWANO, Wi. — A Holstein bull calf, acquired from Paul Lawrence, New Castle, Pa., is now available for sampling from 21st Century Genetics.

The nation's largest, direct-member, farmer-owned cattle breeding cooperative built on its genetic strength with the July sire summary by boosting its averages in Predicted Difference- Dollars (PD$) and Predicted Difference-Milk (PDM).

The newest offering from the full-service organization is 21H1285 Lawrence-Haven Misty Pride-Red, a son of Misty-Maples Arlinda Magnet.

Combined with his maternal grandsire, Chrome-View Jupiter, Pride has a Pedigree Index of +$78, +10F, +18P, +1148M.

Pride's dam is Lawrence-Haven CV Fancy, VG-87. Her top record was as a six-year-old when she had 29,170 pounds of milk, 1,305 pounds of butterfat and a 4.5 percent fat test in 365 days. Fancy has four records over 22,000 pounds of milk. The next dam is also VG-87 with two records over 800 pounds of butterfat.

Pride's pedigree is outcross to traditional red bloodlines with no Cavalier or Triple Threat breeding. Pride is now housed at the 21st Century Genetics headquarters in Shawano, Wi.

The 21st Century Genetics sampling program yielded 13 more graduates for the July 1987 active line-up and the average PD$ value of its first-run sires was ahead of the industry average. The 22 graduates from this year's harvest average +121 PD$.

The cooperative's sampling program includes incentives for qualified users of sampling sire semen. In addition, the young bulls are eligible to become part of the Genetic Acceleration Program (GAP) once their initial sampling period is over.

Pride and the other young sires will have to wait for about four years before their first USDA sire summary is published. Currently, only about one out of six bulls sampled yield credentials high enough to make the active line-up housed in Shawano, Wi. and New Prague, Mn.

Pole Buildings Are Versatile Structures

UNIVERSITY PARK — A pole building is a versatile and economic structure most often used for uninsulated storage buildings or farm animal housing. Other uses include wood decks, boat shelters, lumber sheds, cabins, airplane hangers, warehouses and retail stores. Pole buildings have even been used as an attractive construction style for homes.

Round poles or square posts buried in the ground are the pole building's foundation and support. This type of building is generally simpler, easier, faster and less expensive to build than other types; even the building site requires little preparation before construction begins.

A newly revised booklet "Pole and Post Building Construction" includes many design tips. Information like specifying and selecting construction materials, sizing posts, and framing members to transfer snow, wind and other loads into the ground is included. Builders and do-it-yourselfers will find this booklet particularly helpful, especially if professional engineering design help is unavailable. Special sections are included on designing structures with suspended floors and on grain storage structures. Building plans and construction procedures for five barns and storage plans are included for help in organizing the first jobs as well as reviewing steps after several jobs.

The booklet "Pole and Post Building Construction" may be ordered for $3.50 from Agricultural Engineering Extension, 246 Agricultural Engineering Building, University Park, PA 16802. Please make checks payable to Penn State University.

Unverferth Manufacturing, Kalida, Ohio, has announced the addition of a new, 335-bushel model to its line of heavy duty grain carts.

The new addition, Model GC3500, is the smallest cart in a line whose other models have capacities up to 600 bushels. Like all Unverferth grain carts, the GC3500 combines Slip Plate hopper coating, a forward-folding 12" auger with adjustable damper, and a sump-type pit to provide fast, complete unloading.

Other standard features include: center dump gate, hydraulic auger lock, interchangeable bolt-on axles with torque bars for easy conversion, shear-pin-equipped oscillating hitch, movable drop-leg jack, precision-ground gears, and a drive line slip clutch. And, all Unverferth grain carts are built for long life and fully tested before leaving the factory.

INTRODUCING THE NEW B SERIES SPREADERS FROM HEDLUND/MARTIN

Hedlund/Martin is well-known for innovative manure spreader design. And these new B Series box spreaders are no exception. They're tough, dependable performers with advanced features built right in.

Like the Clad-Tuff® flooring with a super-slick surface, so loads glide out smoothly without undue stress on drives and apron chains. Roller-chain drive for positive action—with double shear bolt protection. Straight line frame for maximum strength. And beater blades bolted in a "rooster comb" pattern to deliver consistent and thorough shredding. There's even a full 10-year warranty on the copper-bearing steel sides.

So if you're in the market for a new spreader, look into the newest shape in performance-engineered efficiency. Look into the new B Series spreaders from Hedlund/Martin.

Inexpensive B Series spreaders are available in six different models. One just right for your farming operation. See them on display at your local Hedlund/Martin dealer. NOBODY HAS MORE HORSEPOWER UNDER FORTY.

Under forty horses, nobody sells more tractors than we do. One reason is simple. We give you more choices.

There are sixteen compact sizes, each a different model. One of them should fit you perfectly. And once you settle on the horsepower, there are still more choices.

Pick special options like 4-wheel drive, power steering or a hydraulic shuttle transmission. Or choose a Kubota-made implement, the best match for any of our Kubota tractors.

There are, however, a couple of decisions we've made for you.

For example, Kubota's own liquid-cooled diesel engine comes standard in every model. An advanced design, it's built for efficient operation. So a little horsepower works like more.

We've also chosen the color.

Mary L. Moore, of Leeper, has been named a Citizenship-Washington Focus 4-H Fellow. Moore is spending this summer in Washington D.C. at the National 4-H Center to assist in training 4-H'ers aged 15 to 19. The 4-H delegates will learn the structure and function of our system of government, citizenship responsibilities, and ways to strengthen teen leadership in 4-H at the community level.

Moore, 21, holds a B.S. degree in science education from Clarion University of Pennsylvania. She was a 4-H member for eight years, and attended the Citizenship-Washington Focus in 1983. She sereved as a camp counselor for four years, was vice president and treasurer of her local 4-H club, and conducted numerous workshops in leadership and public speaking. Moore, a North Clarion High School graduate, has been involved in political activities such as voter registration and local candidate campaigns.

"To me, citizenship means honor and responsibility. I feel that as a citizenof the U.S.A., I share its heritage. I am proud of the United States and feel that it is my responsibility as a citizen to participate actively in our government," said Moore, who will help the delegates gain a better appreciation of the rights and responsibilities of being an American. Her participating at the Citizenship-Washington Focus is supported by a fellowship from the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rotary Club.

Moore, along with 13 other 4-H alumni, will help implement the Citizenship-Washington Focus and other week-long citizenship and leadership training programs from May 31 through August 15. The fellows will provide leadership and information on educational field trips to historical and cultural sites, including Capitol Hill.

Some Citizenship-Washington Focus Fellows will stay on at the end of the program to assist with the American Heritage Conference and the Citizenship-World Focus. The American Heritage Conference is designed to teach leadership skills to 12-14 year olds, and is scheduled for two sessions, August 2-8 and 9-15. The Citizenship-World Focus, which offers older 4-H'ers and adult volunteer leaders training in critical foreign policy issues and international relations, runs from August 9-15. 4-H members and leaders from six states, including Pennsylvania, are expected to participate in the Citizenship-World Focus. — Jodi Richard

New Yetter Coulter

An NH3 Coulter-Applicator recently introduced by Yetter Mfg. Co., Colchester, IL, represents an important advance for deep placement in conservation tillage practices. The new attachment is equipped with a unique pivot arrangement to protect the 20" blade and the unit's narrower knife from damage while injecting anhydrous deeper into the soil where volatilization loss is minimized. If the blade encounters a rock or other object, it merely pivots around the obstruction reducing the chances of damage.

The coulter cuts a path through the trash for the applicator knife which cuts an extremely thin slot. Because the narrow knife reduces soil disruption, the slot has a tendency to close itself, sealing the volatile anhydrous in the soil below the root zone where it can be utilized for maximum effectiveness.

Details on the new Coulter-Applicator are available at all Yetter dealers or by calling toll-free 1-800-447-5777 outside IL, or 1-800-325-7165 in IL. Yetter Manufacturing Co., Colchester, IL 62326-0358.

Careful Baler Operation Enhances Productivity

Using large round balers, such as the Case IH Model 3650, is a popular innovation in haymaking that produces great labor savings. Any new technique requires practicing correct operating procedures, such as ensuring that everyone is clear of the baler before ejecting a bale, and ejecting onto level ground to prevent a bale from rolling out of control.

RACINE, Wisc. — Eight simple procedures for large round balers can significantly enhance productivity, reduce downtime and help reduce the chance of accidents when baling. These easy steps, from studying the operator's manual to following recommended hauling practices, enable farmers to make the most of their time and their baler's operating life.

"Large round balers are a popular innovation in hay handling that offer tremendous labor savings and new storage and feeding options. As with any large piece of equipment, there are several precautions that should be taken to maximize these efficiencies and help eliminate potentially severe injuries," according to George Mueller, manager of product information and training at Case IH.

Study the Operator's Manual

The first of the eight steps is to study every operating procedure listed in the baler operator's manual. "Procedures detailed in a manual vary by manufacturer and also may change as models are updated. As a result, it is important to review the manual prepared specifically for the model being operated," Mueller said.

If the manual is missing, one can be obtained from the manufacturer. If any warning or operating procedure in the manual is unclear, the dealer is the best source to provide an explanation.

Pre-season Check

A pre-season inspection is the key to reduced downtime and providing timely baling that produced high quality hay. Another primary benefit is that missing shields and other potentially dangerous conditions can be recognized and correctd before an accident occurs. The inspection should include:

- removing field trash;
- checking for loose or missing bolts;
- replacing damaged or missing guards and pickup teeth;
- inspecting belts for wear or breakage;
- matching belt lengths to prevent slippage;
- lubricating the baler; and
- making sure all tractor PTO and baler driveline shields are in place.

Match Operating Technique to Conditions

Well cured hay and properly formed windrows are key to producing good bale cores and reducing plugging. For the best formed bales, the windrow should be uniform, moderately heavy, and either approximately one-half of the width of the pickup or equal to the full width of the pickup.

Plugging problems are further reduced by carefully coordinating ground and engine speed to match crop conditions and windrow size. When switching baling materials, consult the operator's manual for necessary baler adjustments and changes in operating technique.

Never Work on a Running Baler

Before making any baler adjustments or repairs, it is essential to disengage the power take off, shut off the engine and apply the tractor brakes. This is especially true when clearing a plugged baler. An operating baler can pull someone into the machine.

To clear a plugged baler, shut off the tractor engine, remove the windguard, remove the plug from the baler and then reattach the windguard. After clearing a plug, spread it into the windrow while the baler and tractor are shut off. Then, resume normal baling. Never attempt to feed any material into the baler by hand.

Eject the Bale Carefully

Ensure that everyone is at an adequate distance from the baler before ejecting a bale, which can weigh up to 2,000 pounds. Equally important, eject the bale on level ground. A bale ejected on sloping ground can roll out of control, damaging property and threatening the safety of neighbors and bystanders.

Be Prepared for Fire

A large quantity of water is necessary to extinguish a bale fire; therefore, make sure the baler is equipped with the large-capacity, water-type fire extinguisher. In case of fire, eject the bale, drive away from it and use the large extinguisher to fight the fire.

The multi-purpose extinguishers commonly found on tractors and trucks are effective in controlling small fires on the baler and the spread of fire from a bale, but they lack the capacity to extinguish the actual bale fire.

Use Proper Equipment to Load Bales

A key factor in preventing bale loading accidents is the proper use of equipment designed to secure and lift large round bales. Adding front or rear counter ballast to balance the load on the tractor is usually a necessary first step to maintain tractor stability and normal steering response.

Front-end loaders cannot properly load and move bales unless they are equipped with a large bale clamp, three-pronged fork or other properly tested device designed to prevent bales from rolling out of the bucket and onto the operator. In addition, a two-post roll-over protective structure is not intended to protect against falling bales.

Follow Recommended Hauling Practices

Five or six large round bales on a wagon may total 9,000 to 10,000 pounds; therefore, use a towing vehicle that is heavier than the load to ensure braking power. Excessive use of tractor brakes can be avoided by using the same gear to go down a hill as is used to climb the hill.

Other special care required when traveling on roads is to maintain legal load widths and display required slow moving vehicle emblems, reflectors and lights. Local highway patrol officers can explain any laws regulating the transport of agricultural equipment and bale loads on public highways.

"Farmers who follow these recommended large round baler operating principles and all the precautions in their operator's manual will reduce the risk of injuries, and will benefit from efficient baling and a timely haying operation," Mueller concluded.

Agricultural Hall Of Fame Schedules Three Inductions

KANSAS CITY — Three individuals who have made lasting contributions to agriculture and rural living in America and the world will be inducted into the Agricultural Hall of Fame, Friday, October 16, 1987.

Inductees this fall are John Deere, 1804-1886, developer of the self-scouring steel moldboard plow and founder of the company which bears his name; Louise Stanley, 1883-1954, first Chief of the U.S.D.A. Department of Home Economics, 1923-43, and Chairman of the University of Missouri Home Economics Department, 1911-23; and J. Sterling Morton, originator of Arbor Day and Secretary of Agriculture from 1893 to 1897.

John Deere was born in Vermont and moved to Illinois in 1837. Louise Stanley was a native of Tennessee who was an early advocate of college degree work and formal education in home economics. J. Sterling Morton was born and educated in Michigan and migrated to the Nebraska Territory in 1854, where he was active in agriculture and politics.

The induction ceremony will be held at 2:00 p.m. in the National Rural Electric Auditorium at the Hall of Fame, just off I-70, 18 miles west of downtown Kansas City. Dr. Robert E. Carlson, Chairman of the Honorees Committee for the Hall of Fame, also announced that a prominent national personality in agriculture will be the featured speaker at the induction ceremony.

Maryland Governor Honors Ag Land Preservation

Maryland agriculture was recognized by Governor William Donald Schaefer as he honored conservation, preservation, and promotion programs in Frederick County on Tuesday, August 18 on the "Do It Now" bus.

The Governor was accompanied by Maryland's Secretary of Agriculture, Wayne A. Cawley, Jr On a whirlwind mini-trip to the David Dotterer farm near Woodsboro, where the Governor presented Mr. Dotterer with a four-foot check in partial payment of the 2000th project completed under the Maryland Agricultural Cost-Share Program, and Catoctin Mt. Orchards, Inc. in Thurmont.

While at the Dotterer farm, Governor Schaefer also honored the 10th Anniversary of the Agricultural Land Preservation Foundation, a Maryland Department of Agriculture program, which has permanently protected more than 60,000 acres of prime Maryland farmland since 1977, and has been recognized by the American Farmland Trust as the best program of its kind in the nation.

Presenting a proclamation declaring August 18 "Farmland Preservation Day" to Board of Directors Chairman William Guy, Governor Schaefer praised the program and the dedication of those farmers who participate in order to keep the Maryland farmland in agriculture.

Dotterer, who has been farming in Frederick County all his life, and is a participant in the preservation program, thanked the Governor and invited him to take a look at conservation measures used on the 118 acre farm.

Dotterer then accompanied the Governor to the top of a hill, where Schaefer was shown grassed waterways, strips, and contours. "I don't know a thing about farming," said Schaefer, "but I'm here to learn.

I see a lot about farmers polluting," said the Governor, "but they are doing a lot to clean up the Bay. I'm proud of what we're doing here in Maryland," he said.

Climbing back aboard the bus,

Governor, accompanied by cretary Cawley, along with rtin Walsh, Secretary of the partment of the Environment, Governor proceeded on to toctin Mountain Orchards in rmont, where he welcomed the ry Black family as the newest ticipants in the "Maryland With de" Promotion.

Presented with a Catoctin Mt. hard tee-shirt sporting the aryland With Pride" logo under scious red apple, the Governor arked that Maryland peaches e the best, and he was proud to e this family-owned and oper- business as part of the "Maryland With Pride" team and presented Mr. Harry Black and his family a logo-bearing paperweight in honor of the occasion.

In the back of a red, stake-bodied truck, the Governor was taken on an orchard tour, picked a bushel of peaches and learned about growing apples, nectarines, and plums.

"I want all of you to buy some of this good Maryland produce while we're here," said Governor Schaefer as the tour ended. "We must give our wholehearted support to people like these farmers who make our economy work," he concluded.
